THE PAINE FAMILY REGISTER, OR GENEALOGICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

No. 1.] Albany, N. Y., January 1, 1857.

1.] INTRODUCTORY.

The undersigned has been for some time engaged in collecting such records and memorials of the family to which he belongs as he could get access to, with the view of rescuing as many of them as possible from further loss or destruction, and ultimately compiling therefrom a genealogical history of the Paines as a monument of the past and a legacy to future generations. In undertaking this task, he claims to be actuated by higher motives than the indulgence of an idle curiosity or the gratification of a foolish vanity. He holds it to be a commendable expression of filial duty and of reverent regard for one's ancestors to keep their memory in honor, and to preserve their names and virtues from forgetfulness. If we rightly esteem the transmission of an untarnished name as the most valuable legacy we can leave to our posterity, it would seem as if we had no right to be indifferent to the heritage of honest fame which our fathers labored to hand down to us.

That the interest felt by the writer is fully shared by others of his name he has the best assurance in the readiness with which his inquiries have been answered by them when applied to, by the discovery he has made that he is not the first or only one who has made some efforts in the same cause, and especially by the expressions of approval and encouragement received from numerous correspondents. Under these favorable considerations, and in the confident persuasion that it is yet possible from the records still extant, though widely dispersed, and every year suffering some decay and loss, to obtain authentic and tolerably complete registers of the principal branches of the family from their first planting on this continent, he does not consider the time and labor he has been able to devote to the investigation as misapplied. On the contrary he is desirous of continuing the inquiry, so encouragingly begun, with still greater assiduity and zeal. But with little leisure in the brief and uncertain intervals of active professional duty, residing at a distance from any considerable depository of ancestral archives, and therefore dependent, in a great degree, upon the favor of correspondents, he finds it necessary, if he would extend the range of inquiry, to adopt some other means of communication than that of written letters, upon which he has thus far relied.

The correspondence which has been gradually expanding itself with the progress of the work, already involves as much time and labor as is consistent with due attention to other necessary duties. In order to obviate the difficulty that seems to oppose itself to any more rapid progress in the pursuit of genealogical knowledge, so far as the present winter is concerned, several plans have been considered. The expedient which appears to have been adopted by some other persons engaged in similar investigations, of a printed inquisitorial circular that would save the necessity of writing so many letters, appears to be the most feasible. When about to act upon this suggestion, the further idea occurred, that by an expansion of the proposed plan so as to furnish as well as solicit information, more interest in the work might be awakened and more extended, and more efficient co-operation secured. Further reflection has confirmed that impression, which it is now proposed to bring to a practical test by submitting the first number of the Paine Family Register, to the attention of those whose interest in the object to which it is devoted is not less than that of the subscriber.

An examination of the contents of this number will render an elaborate statement of the general design of the publication unnecessary. Suffice it to say, that it is intended not only as a means of opening communication between the writer and many individuals whose aid and co-operation he is desirous of securing, but whom he can not hope to reach in any other way, but also as a means of eliciting, collecting and diffusing genealogical information for the benefit of the Paines generally and others allied with them. It is proposed to give in successive numbers such abstracts of the results that have been or may be obtained as will gratify the reasonable curiosity of many who have paid little attention to such studies, and afford a general notion of the progress and success of the inquiry. Besides this it is offered as a medium of intercommunication between the widely scattered members of our now respectably numerous family on all matters relating to the origin, antiquities, history, rise, progress and present position of the "House." Whoever has a question to ask, or any information to give, who wishes to know something, or to tell something, on any of these topics will find the Register a suitable medium for their communications, whether "Notes or Queries." If he should, by this means, be instrumental, in any degree, in bringing distant and perhaps mutually unknown members of the family to a better acquaintance with each other, and of strengthening the sentiment of brotherhood and kinship which habitual non-intercourse tends to weaken, the writer will feel that his labor has not been unfruitful.

HENRY D. PAINE, M.D.

Elizabeth Paine, daughter of Moses Paine (whose will is given above,) was probably the wife of Henry Adams, of Medfield, whose tragical death is described in the following extracts from the "Poligony of the Adams Family"—[See N. E. Gen. Reg., vol. 7.]

"Henry Adams, of Medfield, married Elizabeth Paine, of Baintree, in 1643. She & her husband were killed in the most tragical manner in the second year of Philip's war [1676]."

"The Lieutenant of the town, Adams by name, was shot down by his own men, & his wife mortally wounded by a gun fired afterwards accidentally in the house."—Hubbards's Ind. Wars, p. 1, cv.

"The same night the Lieutenant's widow, being at Mr. Walson's, the minister's house, being upon a bed in the chamber, divers soldiers and commanders being in the room underneath, Capt. Jos de la Haye having a gun in his hand half bent, with the muzzle upwards, he being taking his leave to go to his quarters by some accident the gun fired through, & shot floor mat & through & through the bed of the Lieutenant's widow that lay upon the bed and slew her also."—G. L. H. P. P. P. P. P.

* According to the ancient reckoning the year began in March.

It is intended to issue four numbers of the Register in the course of the year. The continuance of its publication after that, will depend upon the favor with which it is received. As it is designed to be only a sort of family affair "among ourselves," and therefore not looking to an extended circulation for support, the charge for the year will be one dollar, in advance.

It is hoped, however, that the receipts from subscriptions will be more than sufficient to defray the expenses of publication. Should such be the case, the surplus will be devoted to the exploration of town, church and other records, which contain a vast amount of valuable information, which in many cases, can alone furnish the means of deciding obscure genealogical questions. This number will be sent to every person of the name whose address is known. Information that will extend the list of names and places of residence, will be thankfully received.

Those who wish to receive the subsequent numbers will have the goodness to say so, and at the same time send on their dollar.

The second number will be issued on the first of April.

12.] ETYMOLOGICAL AND ORTHOGRAPHICAL.

"What is the true, primitive and orthodox orthography of our family name?" is a question that has been often enough suggested by correspondents, to show that some interest is felt in the subject. Each one naturally feels a preference for that particular mode of spelling to which he is most accustomed; and however the question may be decided, it is scarcely to be expected at this day, that a uniformity of practice would result. Nevertheless, it may be worth some little trouble to ascertain, if it may be done, which of the various appellatives in use by different branches of the family, has the highest authority.

It is with no intention of forestalling discussion, that one orthography rather than another, has been adopted in the title of this publication. The writer has merely followed the usage of his own family, as being that with which he is most familiar, and as being as good as any until competent authority shall decide otherwise. He is quite willing to consider the question an open one, and will be glad to receive communications and suggestions on the subject. As preliminary to any discussion, it may be well to introduce here some few notes that he has made since his attention was called to the matter, and which may assist in elucidating the question.

Examples are found in ancient as well as modern records, of at least four styles of spelling this name, viz: Payne, Payn, Poine and Poia. It not infrequently occurs moreover, that two or three of these will be found in the same document and evidently intended to designate the same person or family. Some instances of that diversity may be seen in this sheet. In copying names care will be taken in every case to preserve the orthography of the original reords, whenever it is possible.) All these names may readily be traced to the same origin, and are doubtless derived from the same latin word PAGANUS. Such probably is also the case with other names found in old English records, as Paynell, Paignell, Paynin, &c, but seldom seen now.

In the Roll of Battle Abbey, the names of the warriors, who accompanied the Conqueror to England, are in two parallel lists, one in Norman French, the other in Latin. In this Roll, Fitz Poine in the Norman list is construed by Filius Pagani, in the Latin.

The same is the case in documents of later date, though still ancient, printed in the "Collectanea Topographica" an English periodical devoted to antiquarian researches. In charters and other documents written in Latin the name Payne or Poier is always Paganus. Although for a long time the term Pagan has been synonymous with Heathen, its original signification was merely a villager, or countryman, in contradistinction to the inhabitant of a city. "In its present signification" says Brander, "it is the opposite of Christian, and is synonymous with heathen, gentile and idolater; and was originally so applied, because the inhabitants of villages continued to adhere to their idolatrous practices after Christianity had been introduced into towns and cities. The precise period when the term Pagan was first used in its present acceptation has not been ascertained."

Of the same purport is the following from Hooker, (Eccles. Pol. Bk. v.) "whereas therefore religion did first take place in cities, and in that respect was a cause why the name of Pagans, which properly signifieth a country people came to be used in common speech for the same that infidels and unbelievers were."

The transition from Pagan to Payne or Poine will seem more probable, when it is remembered that by old English writers it is constantly written Paien or Pagen, and also Pannin, as in the following examples.

*He hid him thider synth and when he come to Twede,
He sank synth oste of paiens that all he was in drede.*

R. Brunne, p. 16.

*All Christen folk ben from that contree
Therough paynes that comeniden all about
The plages of the North by land and see.*

Chaucer—Man of Lawes Tale

And thorn the grace of Jhesu Crist the paynmys his queneire, R. Gloucester p. 401.

Many other examples of the same kind, illustrating the changes of language in the words under consideration, could easily be added, but the above must suffice for this time.

13.] ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

Those correspondents who have favored the work, by their contributions of genealogical information, and their expressions of approval and encouragement, are entitled, at least, to the easy requital of thanks. It would be a pleasure to acknowledge, more specifically, the assistance received from each, but as that is impossible here, this general confession of obligation must suffice. Among others Mr. J. C. Paine, of Chardon, O.; Mr. S. L. Paine of Rootstown, O.; Mr. William S. Payne, of Port Conway, Va.; Dr. L. C. Paine, of Albion, N. Y.; George Sturges Paine, Esq., of Worcester, Mass.; Mrs. Abigail (Paine) Cowles, of Parishville, N. Y.; John W. Paine, Esq., of Troy, N. Y. Dr. H. M. Paine, of Clinton, N. Y.; Mr. Royal Paine, of Sullivan co., N. Y.; Mr. Hendrick E. Paine, Monmouth, Ill.; Albert W. Paine, Esq., of Amesbury, Mass.; and Mr. Thomas Payne, of Southold, L. I., have rendered particularly valuable service. Hon. H. W. Cushman, of Bernardstown, Mass., and Payne K. Kilbourn, Esq., of Litchfield, Conn., experienced and successful laborers in the field of antiquarian and genealogical research, have kindly furnished much useful counsel and many labor-saving hints. Thomas B. Wyman, Jr., Esq., of Charlestown, Mass., has forwarded copies and extracts, from valuable ancient records and papers. In future numbers, these and many other correspondents will see that their labors have not been lost, but that good use has been made of their contributions.

14.] THE NEW ENGLAND HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL REGISTER.

This admirably conducted Antiquarian Journal, the organ of the "N. E. Historic-Genecological Society" of Boston has not only done very much to encourage a spirit of enquiry into family history, but has supplied the means of gratifying it. Its pages are filled with early records of New England settlers and their descendants, which would otherwise be almost inaccessible to ordinary enquirers. It is scarcely possible that in some of the ten volumes already published any early family should have been overlooked by the indefatigable editor or his zealous collaborators. Copious indexes make reference to the varied contents easy. In fine, it is a work quite indispensable to the genealogical or antiquarian student. The writer desires to acknowledge the great assistance it has afforded him in researches.

15.] ORIGINAL RECORDS.

Probate, County, Town and Church Records, are the repositories of a vast amount of Genealogical details, often indispensable to the completion of a family pedigree. Anything like a thorough exploration of these musty, but precious old archives involves an expenditure of time and money that few persons, however enthusiastic in the cause, are willing and able to bear.

One of the strongest inducements to undertake this publication was the hope of awakening an interest in this important branch of the enquiry and to create a fund to be devoted to that purpose. It is hoped, therefore, that the small tax which it is proposed to assess upon those who are disposed to encourage the undertaking, will not be considered improper. Whatever is received over and above the expenses of printing, will be appropriated to the investigations referred to.

The following is the substance of a CIRCULAR LETTER, which was prepared for distribution before this form of publication was decided upon.

16.] CIRCULAR.

The subscriber is engaged in preparing a Genealogical History of the Paine Family, including the different branches and various orthography, from its first settlement in this country to the present time, with a view to publication. In order to facilitate his labor and to render the result more complete, authentic and satisfactory, he is anxious to secure the assistance and co-operation of all who are disposed to further the undertaking. Almost every person bearing the name has it in his power to communicate some facts relating to his family not easily obtainable in any other way; and many have in their possession, or in convenient reach, records, ancient documents, or other memorials of great value in the compilation of a family history.

A few well authenticated particulars, sometimes even a single item, although of little apparent value, standing alone, may be of considerable importance in connection with other related facts.

It is hoped that the object contemplated will commend itself to the approval of all who may be apprised of it, and that each one will consider himself individually and personally appealed to for such information, whether little or much, as he is able to supply on any of the points embraced in the following schedule.

1. They will please give their own names and those in their own immediate family, in full, (including those that are deceased, if any,) with accurate dates of the Births, Marriages or Deaths; their respective places of birth, settlement, or residence, their business, calling, or profession.
2. The same particulars in regard to Father and Mother, Brothers and Sisters.
3. The same of Uncles and Aunts, and their children.
4. The same in regard to Grandfather and Grandmother, and to other ancestors, as far back as can be ascertained.
5. Besides these particulars, state also what offices, Ecclesiastical, civil or military, have been held by any of them. If Graduates of Colleges, when and where educated. If in any wars, in what capacity, when, where, and how long, and other particulars of interest in relation thereto.
6. Other facts and incidents of personal history, adventures, accidents, escapes. Traits of character, habits, eccentricities, &c., &c.
7. Copies from, or accounts of, ancient records, illustrative of individual or family history, epitaphs, inscriptions, letters, autographs, &c., will add interest to the collection, and will be thankfully received.

N. B. Particular attention is called to the importance of accuracy in regard to dates. The value of precision on this point, when it can be secured, cannot be overrated.

Early communications are invited, which may be addressed to 17.] PAYNE FAMILY OF BEDHAM, MASS.

The following remarkable Record is copied from the 5th volume of the N. E. Hist. and Genealogical Register, p. 331.

The following curious record of the Payne or Pain family, who came early to Salem, and finally settled at Dedham, Mass., has been put into the editor's hands, by a lady of the latter place, with liberty to publish it. Although we apply the very common term coram to this record, it is truly a very anomalous curiosity, according to our antiquarian notions of things in that line. The writing from which this copy is made, was begun in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and was added to, from time to time, as the family of which it is a record, increased or diminished; and when the family came to New England, they undoubtedly brought it with them, as the entries upon it show a different hand as well as a different date, the last of which is, as will be seen, 1636.

18.] REHOBOTH PAINES.

A numerous family appears to have descended from STEPHEN PAINE, of Rehoboth, Mass. He is said to have emigrated from Norfolk ex., (Hingham or Gt. In 1641 he, with several other families, including their pastor the Rev. Mr. Newman, removed to a place called by the Indians Sedonk, where they founded a town which they named Rehoboth; as appears by the following extract from the 'Deed of Confirmation' by the colony in 1685.

"Whereas, Mr. Daniel Smith, as agent for the town of Rehoboth answered at this court, and showed, & declared, and made appear unto this court by several writings & records that the bounds of the said town of Rehoboth are as followeth:

20.] THE PAYNES OF VIRGINIA—THE LATE MRS. MADISON.

The materials for studying the families of our name that settled in Virginia, and from thence spread to other southern and south western states, have not been as yet obtained in sufficient extent to supply very satisfactory results. It will be necessary to await further information before attempting to arrange the facts already received into a system; but inquiries have been so frequently made in regard to the family of the late Mrs. Madison (born Payne), that it is believed that any authentic testimony on that subject will be acceptable. The following sketch of the Genealogy of that distinguished lady, although defective in regard to dates, &c., may be relied on, as far as it goes.

JAMES PAYNE was an English gentleman of affluence and education. He settled in Goochland county on James's river, Va. Information that will enable the writer to continue the pedigree of Nathaniel Payne, the son of Stephen, 1. of Rehoboth [18] will be thankfully received.

OTIS PAYNE.

Otis Payne, son of Samuel, of Foxboro, Mass., removed to the state of New York many years ago. Will any of his descendants report themselves and oblige an inquirer?

SOUTHOLD PAYNE.

The following memoranda seem to relate to offshoots from the Dorham family. Who can give the connecting links and other data?

THE PAINE FAMILY REGISTER,

OR GENEALOGICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

No. 2.] Albany, N. Y., April, 1857.

23.] NOTICE.

The first number of the Paine Family Register has been freely distributed, to the extent of several hundred copies, among the dispersed families of our name, wherever they could be found or heard of.

The responses to its appeal, if not as numerous as was prompt as was hoped, have been, in other respects, of as favorable a character as could be desired. The plan of the publication has been warmly commended by every correspondent who has taken the trouble to notice it, and no little interest has been expressed in its success in various ways. It is probably safe to conclude, that the neglect to acknowledge it has in most cases been the result of inadvertence rather than intentional omission.

Letters have been received in answer to the inquiries contained in the circular, embracing a large amount of valuable and interesting facts, and a number of correspondents have promised their assistance in collecting and contributing information to be added to the general stock. To enumerate at length the obligations due to all who have in different ways promoted the objects of the Register, would occupy more space than can well be spared at present. As the work proceeds, however, correspondents will perceive that free use has been made of their favors, which, it is hoped, will be accepted as a sufficient acknowledgment until an opportunity occurs to refer to them more particularly.

The amount of material collected and furnished, although still incomplete in many departments of family lore, is such as to make it necessary to select for publication in these pages such portions as are likely to be of the greatest general interest. On this account particular attention has been paid to the earlier records, though not to the entire exclusion of more recent facts. If the encouragement should be sufficient to warrant the expense, twice the present number of pages could easily be filled with interesting matter of this kind from the stock already on hand and easily accessible.

A few hundred copies of the first number still remain, which will be cheerfully sent to any members of the family not already supplied. Correspondents will confer a favor by forwarding the names and residences of all persons of the name of Paine (however spelled) with which they are acquainted, and also of any others who from alliance or other causes would be likely to take an interest in the subject.

It would greatly facilitate the labor of examining and arranging the great number and variety of facts which this investigation brings to light, if some member of each branch of the family would undertake to collect, assort and systematize the particulars relating to his own stock.

The "Eastham" family [3] is well taken care of in this respect. Dr. Lemuel C. Paine, who has already qualified himself by previous labors in this department, has consented to take charge of the communications, records, &c., which concern that branch of the family, and from the materials in his hands, or which may be forwarded to him, to prepare for the pages of the Register such delineations of his family history as he may consider suitable. Information or inquiry relating to the "Eastham" family of Paines may be sent directly to his address at "Albion, Orleans co., N. Y."

A similar arrangement as respects the "Dedham" family [17] has been proposed to Dr. Horace M. Paine, of Clinton, Oneida co., N. Y., who cheerfully consents to act as "Editor" of that department and will be glad to receive communications on the subject. It is hoped that other individuals equally well qualified as these will be found to render like assistance in regard to their respective families.

26.] RHODE ISLAND HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

At a late meeting of this society, according to the Providence Daily Journal, after the transaction of the ordinary business, Rev. E. M. Stone read official papers, procured by him during the past summer, relating to the early history of the Island of Prudence, by which it appeared that as early as 1691, New York claimed jurisdiction over that and other islands in Narragansett Bay. In the year referred to, Chebatwasset, the Indian name of Prudence, was confirmed by patent to "Mr. John Paine, merchant of London," and erected into an independent government, under the designation of "Sophy Manor;" "to be holden according to the Manor of East Greenwich, in the County of Kent, in England." Of this Manor, Mr. Paine was appointed governor for life, with power to appoint a deputy whenever absent; courts for the trial of civil and criminal cases within certain prescribed limits, were also ordained, and "liberty of conscience granted to all the inhabitants, or others upon the said Island, professing the Christian Religion."

The facts embraced in these papers are new to Rhode Island antiquarians; and it would be interesting to know in what light the colonists viewed the assumed jurisdiction of New York, and whether any attempt was ever made to carry the provisions of the Manor patent into effect. We hope research will be prosecuted in that direction.

27.] COMPLIMENTARY.

The Providence Journal having honored the Paine Family Register with a "first rate notice," of more than half a column in length, is entitled to our thanks for so unexpected a favor. As our unpretending sheet is not of a character to excite attention beyond the circle of those who are particularly interested, this unsolicited commendation of its object, plan and execution is the more gratifying.

28.] REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS.

Corrections and additions to the genealogy of this family, which was commenced in the first number of the Register.

STEPHEN PAINE, the founder of this family had two (three) wives. First, ROSE, who died Jan. 20, 1660; second, Mrs. ALICE PARKER. She was the widow of William Parker, whose will, dated May 15, 1659, and proved June 4, 1662, is recorded in Plymouth records. She was married to Stephen Paine in 1662. In his will given below [33], mention is made of his wife ELIZABETH, from which it appears that he married a third time. See also will of Alice Paine, [35], for further evidence of this. Stephen Paine died Aug. 1679 (not 1699 as stated in the first No.), having survived his two sons, Stephen and Nathaniel, a few months.

STEPHEN, of the 2d generation, was born about 1630, in England, and was therefore eight years old when he emigrated with his father to N. E., in 1638. He was an active participant in the war with the Indian King Phillip, contributing not only his personal services, but also of his means; wife's name ANNE. He died 1678. For an abstract of his will see [8]. The names of his children, and the dates of their birth are correctly given [18].

NATHANIEL, brother of the foregoing, was also born in England; date not known; wife's name ELIZABETH. He contributed £400 to the expenses of Phillip's war, a much larger sum than that of any other subscriber. He was Deputy to the Gen. Court in 1676-7; died 1678, leaving one son, Nathaniel. A memorandum in regard to his estate is given in [9].

STEPHEN, of the 3d generation, son of Stephen, Jr., died 1710. Soon after his death, his widow Mary, removed from Rehoboth, with her two young children, Stephen and Edward, to Preston or Pomfret, Conn. By a receipt, given and recorded, March 19, 1629, to discharge the executor of their father's estate, they were "both of Preston" in that year. Edward was of Pomfret in 1740.

STEPHEN, of the 4th generation, born in 1708, son of the preceding, settled in North Bolton (now Vernon), Conn., married DEBORAH SALVAGER; died at Ellington, Conn., in 1793 or 5. His children were:

J. STEPHEN, born 1740, at Bolton, Conn.; settled in East Windsor, Conn.; died about 1807; married LARA COGS, who died 1797 or 8. His children were: 1. Stephen, who died in camp at Greenbush, N. Y., 1813. 2. Eliza, b. 1764; d. 1804 at Painesville, Ohio. 3. Rufus, b. 1757; d. about 1827, near Utica, N. Y. 4. Solomon, b. Sept. 26, 1760; d. 1845, in Ohio. 5. Lydia, b. —, d. about 1823; m. The genealogy of the other sons of Stephen Paine, 2d, will be continued in the next No.

THE PAINE FAMILY REGISTER, OR GENEALOGICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

No. 3.] Albany, N. Y., July 1, 1857.

Since the publication of the second number of the Register, several valuable and interesting communications have been received. Some of these furnish corrections and supply deficiencies in articles already published, while others break ground in entirely new directions.

Only a few of them are intended for insertion in these columns, but are designed to be used as occasion requires in arranging genealogical tables, completing pedigrees, &c., &c. The more information received of this kind the greater is the demand for still more. Facts, items, traditionally anecdotes, biographical notices, marriages, births, deaths, and scraps of all kinds, as well as more elaborate articles, will continue to be gratefully acknowledged.

From the materials on hand, a larger proportion of narrative articles has been selected for this number than the preceding. It is not intended to follow any definite plan in the choice of contents, but to furnish such a variety of information touching the history of the different branches of the family as will awaken and keep alive an interest in the undertaking, and also to gather up the scattered and disconnected facts that would otherwise be lost, for the use of some future historian and compiler.

It is intended to issue the fourth number of the Register, on or about the first of October. It will probably be decided by that time, whether the publication meets with sufficient favor to warrant its continuation for another year.

48] EAST WINDSOR (CONN) PAINES.

The continuation of this branch of the "Rehoboth" family (see [32], in 24 No.), is postponed till the next number. By this delay it is hoped that a more full and satisfactory record will be obtained than the present materials furnish. Valuable assistance in the completion of this pedigree has been promised. Communications respecting two other important offshoots of the Rehoboth Tree will be found in this number.

49] THE PAYNES OF VIRGINIA.

The following account of one of the families of the Virginia stock, has been furnished by the Hon. Wm. P. Payne of Kentucky. Although deficient in accuracy of dates, it cannot be but interesting to the readers of the Register. It is hoped that similar information in regard to other southern families of our name, will be communicated in time.

Bowling Green, Kentucky, Dec. 11, 1857.

From the best and most reliable sources of information, my father, the late Major David Payne, among them, I make the following statement:

WILLIAM PAYNE, my great-grandfather, came from England to the United States many years since, and settled in Fairfax county, Virginia. Whether he had brothers or not, I am not advised—he had three sons by his first wife—WILLIAM, HOWARD and SYDNEY; who, at about 70 years of age, he married a maiden lady by the name of Jennings, who lived with the family many years previous to the death of his first wife, by whom he had one son, JOHN. This son moved to Kentucky about the year 1783 or '84, and settled in Scott county, Kentucky, where he married a sister of Richard M. Johnson, who, 'twas said, "killed Tecumseh," the great Indian chief.

Gen. JOHN PAYNE held a command in the militia, and was in active service during the last war with Great Britain, under Gen. Hull or Harrison—not sure which. He has been dead some years—a portion of his children, I have heard, moved to Missouri.

It has been stated that his mother (Miss Jennings), had a brother and sister who came to this country with her, all under the charge of some English nobleman (possibly Lord Fairfax, with whom it is said by some, William Payne, our ancestor, came), and that a brother of theirs, left in England, died many years since, leaving a large fortune in the hands of trustees, until the principal and interest should amount to some 10 or 20 million of dollars, when they were to advertise for his descendants and those of his family who could be found. I heard that such advertisement had been made, and am of opinion that if any of the Payne family have any claim to this legacy, it is the heirs of this John Payne.

A lady living some 40 miles from this, some years since, stated she was a grand-daughter of the brother or sister of Col. Payne's second wife, and a grand-daughter of the Jennings, who died in England.

OF SYDNEY PAYNE, of a family, I know but little, as he married and settled in a distant part of Virginia. A son of his, by the name of Robert, moved from Bourbon county, Kentucky, in 1812, where he had been living for a good many years, to Missouri. He had a large family of children, but I do not know their names.

HOWARD PAYNE moved to Kentucky about the same time John Payne did, in 1783 or '84, and settled in Fayette county, near Lexington, Kentucky, where a large number of his descendants still live. Among his sons I can mention George, William, Edward, Howard & James. He had a daughter who married a Mr. Lewis. He might have had other children, but if so, I do not know their names. A great-grandson of his, David McVay Payne, a lawyer, living in Lexington, Kentucky, could give us a full account of that family. As a family, they are wealthy and respectable, and many of them members of the Baptist church. His son William was a Baptist preacher, settled near Washington in Mason county, Kentucky. He raised several children by his first wife, the first of whom settled in Kentucky. A great-grandson, W. R. Payne, lives near H. Ansellville, Kentucky. By his second wife, a Miss Harrison, he had John V., Brice H., and Edmund, his descendants probably others. The first was a preacher in the Christian church, and his family reside in or near Versailles, Kentucky. Brice resides in New Orleans, Edmund lives with a sister in the same city, and is a member of the Baptist church. The remaining son of my great-grandfather,

WILLIAM PAYNE, settled in Fairfax, Virginia, and is the individual with whom William, a member of a late Washington club, a circumstance which occurred on some public occasion in Alexandria, but not having the history at hand, I will annex the following from "Collins' History of Kentucky," which is the same in substance: "Col. Devall Payne was born January 1, 1764, in the county of Fairfax, Virginia, within 7 miles of Alexandria. He was the son of William Payne, whose paternal ancestor accompanied Lord Fairfax from England, when he came over to colonize his grant in Virginia. At the time General Washington was stationed in Alexandria, as a colonel of a British regiment, before the war of the revolution, an altercation took place in the court house yard, between him and Mr. Payne, in which Mr. Payne knocked him, Washington, down. Great excitement prevailed, as Payne was known to be firm and stood high, and Washington was beloved by all. A night's reflection, however, satisfied Washington that he was the aggressor and in the evening, and the next morning, he, like a true and magnanimous hero, sought an interview with Payne, which resulted in an apology from Washington; a warm and lasting friendship between the two, formed on mutual esteem, was the result. During the revolutionary war, whilst General Washington was on a visit to his family, Mr. Payne, with his son Devall, went to pay his respects to the great American chief; Washington met him at some distance from the house, took him by the hand, and led him into the presence of Mrs. Washington, to whom he introduced Mr. Payne as follows: "My dear, here is the little man of whom you have heard me often speak, who had the courage to knock me down in the court house yard in Alexandria, big as I am."

I have often heard my father, Devall Payne, detail the circumstances above related, and his own thoughts and feelings during their walk through the yard, and during the introduction—but in a few moments all were made to feel at home. I have no information as to the part my grandfather took in our revolutionary struggle. He had three sons, William, Benjamin and David, and several daughters, among whom I can name Anna, who married — Cook, Mary, who married Pierce Bayly, of London county, Virginia, Pearl P., who married — West, and Margaret, who married Thomas Young.

WILLIAM entered the service of his native state in the Continental line, during the revolution, and was wounded in an engagement with the British, near Norfolk, Virginia; he was confined to the care of a wealthy family by the name of Robinson, who resided near the field of battle, and before he left their hospitable roof, gained the consent of a daughter of his kind host, to become his partner for life. After this marriage, he settled in Fairfax, near Alexandria. By this marriage he had the following sons: William R., Tohy R., Edmund, Alfred and Thomas, and two daughters, Prilla, who married Gales Cook, and Eliza, who married successively — West, — Wells and — R. King. After his first wife's death, he married a widow by the name of —, the military land warrants secured 1,141.45 acres in Kentucky—three 1600 acre surveys in Warren county, Allen county. He died in 1813.

WILLIAM R. married Betsy Cook in 1801, and moved to Kentucky, and first settled on the land of his father mentioned above, but afterwards removed to Bowling Green, Warren county. He served as magistrate and sheriff for many years; was elected to the legislature, besides filling many other stations of honor. He commanded a company in a rifle service during the war of 1812, was with his company at the River Thames, at Fort Mifflin; he was popular and highly esteemed. They had only one child a daughter, Lucinda, who married William P. Payne. His wife died in 1819, and he in 1847.

THOMAS R. PAYNE removed to Kentucky about the year 1809; settled in Warren county; married a widow by the name of —, they had one child, a daughter, Mary P., who married, first, — Armstrong, and after his death — Williams. They lost his life by falling from the top of a two story house, in 1828. His wife died in 1840.

ALFRED PAYNE moved to Kentucky in 1809; settled in Scottsville, Allen county, where he filled the office of county surveyor for many years. He lived a bachelor, and died in 1853.

EDMUND PAYNE married a Miss Hawley, and moved to Kentucky in 1819, and settled in Warren county, where he filled many honorable stations—magistrate, representative to the legislature, &c. They had 4 sons, William Henry, John Henry, Isaac and Eugene, and 3 daughters, Elizabeth, married — Drake, Fannie, married, — Summers and Kate, who married — Senior. He died in 1851.

THOMAS PAYNE removed to Kentucky, and settled in Allen county in 1819; married Miss Galton; removed to Illinois in 1828; lost his wife in 1833, and accidentally lost his own life in 1834, by sliding off a hay stack, which he had just finished, upon a hay fork, which was standing against the stack. They had several children, their names not recollected.

BENJAMIN, the 2d son of William Payne, married a Scotch lady, by the name of Campbell; they settled in or near Culpeper co., Va.; had two sons, William and George, and two daughters, Anna, who married John Cook, and Eliza, who married Archibald Summers. Benjamin Payne died in Virginia. His family removed to Kentucky about the year 1815, and first settled in Montgomery county.

WILLIAM, his son, married, and removed to Warren county. He was a physician and farmer, and represented the county in the legislature. He had an only daughter, who married I. H. Wood. He died in 1837, and his wife in 1850.

CONNELLY and died a bachelor.

DEVAL PAYNE, the third son of William Payne, was born 1st January, 1764, in Fairfax co., Virginia; married a Miss Bient, whose father resided in London, or Prince William county, 1st Dec. 1785; removed to Kentucky in 1789, settled near Lexington, in Fayette county. Shortly after his arrival in Kentucky he volunteered in Capt. McKay's troop of cavalry, and served under Gov. Claiborne, in a campaign against the Weaw Indians, on the Watkins, who was with McKay when he was wounded, and helped him from the field. During the engagement, as Payne's horse leaped a log, in the charge, he encountered an Indian warrior, who was lying behind the log, and who raised his gun, which snapped, at Payne. As his horse made the leap Payne threw down his own arms, seized the rifle of the Indian, jerked it from him, and threw it away, and at the same instant lighted off his horse upon the Indian, who rose with Payne, and in doing so drew his knife, which Payne also wrested from him, and threw that away. Payne again threw him, but as the Indian was naked he could not get behind him and he again rose with Payne, and drew his tomahawk, which Payne likewise succeeded in taking from him, and threw that away also, determined, from the first, to take him a prisoner, if possible, although at the risk of his own life. After Payne had thus disarmed him, and a third time thrown him to the ground, the Indian surrendered, by holding out his open hand to his conqueror. Col. D. Payne was over six feet tall, and very active and unassuming. In 1792 he, with his family, removed to Mason county, where he purchased a land company, where he resided until 1800, his horse's stolen out of his stable yard by the Indians, and on one occasion, returning from a hunt, after sunset, was fired at, the ball passing through the top of his head. Then at day break, a mob of his neighbors, together with soon struck the ball out of his head, which they followed him to, pursuant to the Ohio river, some 12 or 14 miles, where the Indians crossed him, they could be overtaken. He was in several other excursions after Indians. He filled many offices of trust during his life. He was magistrate for many years; sheriff and surveyor; served frequently as both branches of the legislature; was chosen clerk of a jury, 1805, and 1811, and of a session of the court of appeals. During the war of 1812 he was offered the command of the 1st battalion of Col. R. M. Johnson's regiment of mounted volunteers, with which regiment he joined Gen. Harrison, in the north, and led the charge made against the British troops commanded by Gen. Proctor, at the river Thames. After the gallant and successful charge made by his battalion, and the surrender of the British troops, he was ordered by Lt. Col. Jas. Johnson to take a company of his men and pursue Gen. Proctor, who, it was ascertained had made his escape. It required but a few moments to give his orders, and he, with John Chambers and some other personal friends, who had volunteered to make the charge against the British, led the pursuing party on the road to the Moravian towns, the route they learned Gen. Proctor had taken. A dash of a few miles brought them up with Proctor's carriage, from which it was evident the horses had just been cut loose; in looking for his command, however, there were but few in sight. Leaving one in charge of the carriage he, with Chambers and two others, dashed off again in pursuit, and on reaching the town, distant some 12 or 14 miles from the field of battle, they became satisfied that Proctor had taken to the woods, when they retraced their march, taking, in the route, many prisoners. They secured the private and public papers of the commander and his side arms, and returned to camp without an accident, much to the relief of his servant, Abner, who, after the battle, could gain no intelligence of his master, and was searching for his remains on the battle field. After this signal victory over the British and their Indian allies, Johnson's regiment returned to Kentucky, and Major Payne to the domestic comforts of his family, on Mill creek, Mason county, where he continued to lead an active and useful life, up to the time of his death, which occurred on the 25th June, 1830; having been for some years, as well as his wife, a member of the Baptist church. They had seven sons, John, James B., Hugh B., William P., Thomas Y., Benjamin C., and Decall, Jr., and 6 daughters; Pendope, married D. Vertner, Mary L. married John Morris, Margaret, Mrs. B. married John Langhorne, Susan C. married S. Bond, and Alena married Jas. Bond. See Art. (21.)

Major Payne was educated for a lawyer, and settled in Augusta, Kentucky, receiving the appointment of clerk of the county and circuit court, which he filled for many years. His first wife was a Miss Sprigg, whom he married in Wheeling, Va. She lived but a few years. He afterwards married a Miss Whitman, of Ohio. John Payne, with Captain Smith, raised a troop of cavalry, and tendered their services as volunteers to Gen. Harrison, who, at that time, commanded the North Western army. Smith was elected to command, and Payne as First Lieutenant. This troop was a portion of Simrall's regiment, which C. A. Campbell, against the Missinewa Indian towns, during the last war, was appointed to the office of Adjutant General to command it, in which office he acquitted himself with credit. After the expiration of the term for which the regiment had been raised they received their discharge, and returned to Kentucky. Lieutenant Payne, however, again engaged for volunteers, and in a short time was chosen captain of his troop. On reaching his headquarters, Captain Payne's troops were attached to Col. Bell's squadron, composed of French laborers and valuable service during the campaign, and with the army at the defeat of the British and Indians, under Proctor and Tecumseh, at the river Thames. When Gen. Harrison could no longer give his troops employment they received an honorable discharge, and returned to their homes, in Kentucky. John was popular among the masses, by which he was appreciated, and beloved by all who were intimate with him. He died in 1834. Had seven sons, Benjamin, who is now residing in Lexington, Kentucky, and several daughters; Pendope, much celebrated for her piety, talents, beauty and accomplishments, Eliza and several others. See Art. (21.)

alry during the last war; was in the engagement at the Missinewa towns, and suffered much with others, from the severe cold. He married a Miss Summers, and resides in Newport, Ky. His other two sons, Edwin D. and Ben. T. Payne, are both married; the former to Maria E. Payne, and has a daughter, Lucinda, and son William, both young.

500. REHOBOTH PAINES—VERMONT BRANCH

Record of that branch of the Paine family which settled in the state of Vermont at various periods from their native place, Pomfret (now Brooklyn), Connecticut.

SETH, PAYNE was a grandson of Stephen Paine, the founder of the "Rehoboth" family, through his eldest son Stephen 2d. See Art. (18) in the 1st No. of the Register.

He had sons, Samuel, N. A., Stephen, Daniel and Seth.

SETH, the progenitor of the branch of the family now referred to, was born March 4th, 1720, and married Mable Tyler, Nov. 1st, 1749. He was possessed of strong intellectual powers, persevering industry in acquiring that useful knowledge, which made him a schoolmaster, a teacher in his native town. He was originally a farmer, but having six sons he turned his attention to agriculture; was several times a member of the State Legislature. He died at the age of 72, at Pomfret, Connecticut, in less than one week his wife was laid beside him in the grave.

CHILDREN OF SETH AND MABLE PAYNE.

1st, SETH PAYNE, born August 22d, 1750, was a practical farmer. He removed with his family to Frowville, Vermont, where, with the respect and confidence of all he died in 1820. His eldest son, Joseph, was educated at Dartmouth and qualified himself for the profession of the law, settled at White River, and died in a few years unmarried. Elizabeth was a farmer, married, and died in the meridian of life, leaving several children.

21. JOHN PAINE, who seems to have been a great favorite in his family, from their manifest desire to perpetuate his name, was born March 21st, 1753. He early formed the resolution of clearing a new farm in the wilderness, and he and his brother Ebenezer were the first pioneers into the upper part of Vermont. Those having felt the first taces and partially subdued a spot in the forest, he then over exertion contracted a fever which terminated his single life at Windsor in 1785.

31. ELMER PAINE, was born January 21st, 1757, was educated at Harvard College, Mass., was first engaged at Windsor as an agriculturalist and merchant until 1787 when he removed to Williamstown, Vt., upon his father's place, and resided through a long and eventful life, highly respected for his various attainments, was Senator in Congress when they met at Philadelphia, and Judge of the District Court of the United States until within a few weeks of his death, which occurred in April, 1842 at Williamstown. He left four sons and two daughters, the eldest, Dr. Robert Paine, is now an eminent physician in New York, Charles, a lawyer of ability, and Charles, late governor of Vermont, resided at Northfield, extensively engaged in the manufacture of wood. The youngest, George, I know nothing of.

The first of Elmer's two daughters, Charlotte, unmarried, and recently living with George P. Marsh, late American Minister at Constantinople; the latter, Sophia, married and living at Boston.

4th. ELMER PAINE, born August 22d, 1758, settled in Eleston, North Carolina, employed in navigation, where, after forty years' residence, his humane example in the treatment of his slaves, rendered the conduct of all within his influence comparatively happy. In 1826 he came home to meet his only surviving brother, and his Heavenly Father willed that his dust should mingle with that of a beloved one who had gone before him to the tomb. He left two sons and a daughter; John, the eldest, is lately in Texas; Robert was educated at Harvard, in Washington (now Trinity) College, was a somewhat distinguished colonel in the Mexican war, and since 1845 has Commissioner on the part of the Faint States with Mexico. See Article [21]. He is now in the House of Representatives at Washington, an American member in the First District of North Carolina. Anna is a widow with three children residing on a plantation in Alabama.

He died August 17th, 1826, at Troy, N. Y.

5th. ADAMS PAINE, born May 25th, 1762, at Poultney, Ct., was designed by his father for an attorney, but, being of a robust constitution, he pursued that profession only until his eighteenth year. In the early part of his life industry and frugality were customary to him, and he refused to assist his clergyman in the service of the vestry, while wending his way upon one of the second-class stages, decided to resign the pious and respectable office. He married and resided, and engaged the people to send him to Harvard College. When, after spending two years at Yale, he graduated at Harvard, and immediately entered the law office of Gen. B. Bradley, at Westminster, Vermont, he is admitted to the practice in the State of New York, at Boston, born July 21st, 1763, at Poultney, N. Y., Oct. 25, 1828, Sept. 9, 1797, at Westminster, Vt., was a very easy enabled him to purchase an elegant situation, to which was attached a farm well cultivated, and in the second winter, Vt.; there with small and energy, in a family, he pursued the arduous and responsible duties of his position for eighteen years, raised a family of six sons and five daughters, to whom he was in the enjoyment of giving every advantage in his power, of an early and thorough education. In 1807 he removed with all his household to Troy, N. Y., and placed his son, then a lad of fourteen years, at Union College, who after graduating was enmeshed with jurisprudence and was associated with his father until 1823. He died Dec. 25th in that year, in the full vigor of intellectual enjoyment, at the age of 62, in Troy.

6th. DANIEL PAINE, born Jan. 29th, 1767, was also a tiller of the earth, was married early in life to a most estimable woman. They removed at the close of the last century to Randolph, Vt., where with his native industry his home was the abode of genuine hospitality. He died at Randolph in February, 1811, leaving three sons and four daughters; John is now a wealthy merchant in New York, Anna is in the navy, and Daniel is in mercantile business in Providence, R. I.

The daughters of Seth Paine and Mable Tyler were three: Mary, born May 4th, 1753, died Nov. 23d, 1765, Poultney, Ct.; Sarah, born April 4th, 1760, died, I can not say when certainly, Dec. 18th, March 20th, 1764, died at Gubbins, Vt. The nine children were all born at Poultney, Ct.

The fifth son, Adams Paine, and Elizabeth Hosmer had one son, John, and six daughters. The only son, John, was born at Windsor, Vermont, on the 12th of February, 1793. He resided at his native place until 1806, and passed the following year at Montreal at school. He entered the preparatory Grammar School at school in 1811. After leaving college he read law in his father's office, in Troy, N. Y., until 1813, and further pursued the profession in New York city, with the late Judge John Wells in New York city, and from 1814 until 1833 practiced law in Troy, N. Y. In that year he was elected cashier of the bank of Troy, which he held until the day of his death, February 7, 1852, at Troy, N. Y., of the age of 59. He was one of the most honest, straightforward, energetic and self-sustained men, to whose efforts and foresight the city of Troy is indebted for its reputation for enterprise everywhere maintains. The greater part of a long and useful life was passed in this city, and for many years prior to his death he stood with the ablest and foremost in sustaining the best interests of the city, with which interest he was thoroughly conversant; and on those his eyes were kept with sleepless vigilance. His name—always a token of strength—has been associated with every important public enterprise that has engaged the attention of the citizens for the last twenty-five years. There would have been no accident for his arduous and faithful labors that she can never repay. Possessor of a clear and sound mind, great financial skill, and a fervor within his power to sacrifice he could readily make, was to a great extent prompt to the prosperity of any desired object. Possessor of his character to extend assistance to those who needed and deserved it in its due and as a true and valued friend, a real benefactor, his death will long be sorely lamented by not a few who, in many relations have been benefited by his counsel and assisted by his friendship, as if he was substantial and unswerving. He married Elizabeth Ann Williams, of Troy, N. Y., Feb. 14th, 1827, at Troy, N. Y. Two daughters of Adams Paine and Elizabeth Ann Williams were six: Anna Paine, born Feb. 6, 1799, still living at Troy, N. Y.; Mary Paine, born Nov. 6, 1799, living at Windsor, P. Ct.; Elizabeth Paine, born April 19, 1795, died July 25, 1811, at Troy, N. Y.; Anna Paine, born Feb. 21, 1797, died April 14, 1811, at Troy, N. Y.; Sarah Paine, born Feb. 21, 1801, died Aug. 18, 1811, at Windsor, Vt.; Anna Paine, born Jan. 31, 1804, died at Troy, N. Y. All born at Windsor, Vt.

The fourth son, Charles Hosmer, was born at Boston, Feb. 20, 1765, died at Troy, N. Y., Oct. 20, 1848.

John Paine, (see father), the only son of Adams Paine and Sarah Paine, married Elizabeth Ann Williams, of Troy, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1827, and left two sons and one daughter: John Paine, born May 26, 1828, at Troy, N. Y.; Anna Paine, born Feb. 17, 1828.

51] THE PAINES OF WORCESTER, MASS.

This is a branch of the "Rising Sun" family, through the Hon. Nathaniel Paine, a great-grandson of Stephen Paine, the founder of the stock in this country.

I. Generation: STEPHEN PAINE, of Gt. Ellingham, co. Norfolk, Eng., afterwards of Rehoboth, Mass. *

II. Gen. STEPHEN, of Rehoboth. *

III. Gen. NATHANIEL, of Rehoboth. *

IV. Gen. NATHANIEL, of Bristol, R. I., afterwards of Worcester, Mass., who is removed in 1738. He held a political office of some consideration, being called 'Hon. Nathaniel Paine.' He m. Sarah, d. m. of Timothy Clark of Boston. He d. 1741, leaving issue: i. Edward, who m. don. of Benjamin Bosworth, of Bristol, R. I. ii. Nathaniel, m. don. of William Gallup, (Calliope) of Bristol, R. I. iii. Samuel, d. young. iv. Samuel Clark, Capt. R. N. v. Sarah, m. Thomas Downes, of Boston. vi. Dorothy, m. Hon. John Chandler, of Worcester, Mass., the second of the name. He was called in England "the honest village," his claims for losses in this country being deemed so very moderate, though they exceeded £17,000 sterling, and were allowed to the fullest extent. He d. in London, 1789. vii. Timothy.

V. Gen. TIMOTHY, youngest son of Hon. Nathaniel Paine, of Bristol, R. I., was b. July 30th, 1730. Removed when eight years old to Worcester, with his father. His name stands fifth in the class of 1748 of Harvard College, Cambridge. Soon after leaving college he was engaged in the public service. He m. 1749 Sarah, don. of Hon. John Chandler of Worcester, the first of the name settled there, and of Hannah Gardner, his wife, described as daughter of John Gardner, Lord of the Isle of Wight, in the Province of New York. She was a sister of John Chandler who m. Dorothy Paine, as above.

Timothy Paine, and Sarah Chandler, his wife, not only feared God—but honored the King. They belonged to Families, often associated together in the remembrance of the present generation, as having adhered, through the wavering fortunes, and final success of the Revolution, devotedly and consistently, to the British Crown. The Chandlers were, in every respect, the most eminent Family in Worcester County, and furnished many men of distinction, in its antebellum history. They were closely allied by blood, marriage, or friendship with the Aristocracy of the Family and Province, in which they had extensive, and almost unbounded sway, as prime origin. They had large possessions, and shared with the Paine Family the political influence at Worcester, but did not, like that Family, survive the shock of the Revolution, and retain a full habitation and a name? Their property was confiscated, and they were declared traitors. The Family was broken up. Some members of it went abroad and died there. Others were retained in this country. Yet not a few of the descendants remained in the most honorable, pursuits, and in the highest station in life, with abundant money, and in various ways the still represent that ancient, honorable and distinguished race. President John Alden Dix and C. C. Johnson are two. Tim's History of Worcester. With an Address to the Bar of Worcester Co., &c., &c.

When the appeal to arms appeared, between this Country and Great Britain, many of the inhabitants of Worcester, most distinguished by talents, influence and honors, adhered with constancy to the King. Educated with sentiments of veneration for the Sovereign to whom the sacred sovereignty, inherited rights, honors, and wealth they possessed; by duty and gratitude, often influenced them, to act as well to their own as to the country and rebellion. With respect to the severity of measures, attended by the sacrifice of property, the loss of power, and all the horrors of civil war and exile, the struggle between the patriotism of the people and the loyalty of a minority, powerful in numbers, as well as talents, wealth and influence arrived at its crisis in Worcester early in 1774, and terminated in the total defeat of the loyalists. Among the many grievances, the vesting the government in the dependants of the King, aggravated the irritation, and urged to acts of personal violence. The weight of public indignation fell on those appointed to offices under the new acts, and they were soon compelled to lay aside their obnoxious honors. Timothy Paine, Esq., had received a commission as one of the Magistrate-Councillors. High as was the personal regard and respect for the purity of private character of this gentleman, it was controlled by the political feeling of a period of excitement, and measures were taken to compel his resignation of a post, which was unwelcome to himself, but which he dared not refuse, when declining would have been construed as contempt for the authority of the King by whom it was conferred.

[Lincoln's History of Worcester.]
The journals of the day best describe his treatment by the indignant Whigs:

"The spirit of the people was never known to be so great since the first settlement of the colonies, as it is at this time. People in the country for hundreds of miles, are prepared, and determined to DIE or be FREE.

August 23d, 1774.
Yesterday, Mr. Paine, of Worcester, was visited by near 3000 people; notice was given of the intended visit the day before, from one town to another, and though the warning was so short, the above number collected and most of them entered the town before 7 o'clock in the morning. They all marched into the town in order, and drew up on the common, and behaved admirably well: they chose a committee of 2 or 3 men from each company to wait upon Mr. Paine and demand a resignation of his office as Councillor; that committee being large, they chose from among themselves, a sub-committee, who went to his house, where he agreed to resign that office, and drew up an acknowledgment, mentioning his obligation to the county for favors done him, his fervor for taking the oath, and promise that he never would act in that office contrary to the charter, and after which he came with the committee to the common, where the people were drawn up in two bodies, making a lane between them, through which the committee and he passed, and read divers times as they passed along, the said acknowledgment; they then returned in a peaceful manner to their own homes, except about 500, who repaired to Rutland, to demand the like promise from Col. Murray."

[Supplement to the Boston Evening Post, Sep. 5th, 1774.]

"At first Mr. Denio, one of the committee, read his resignation in his behalf. It was then insisted that he should read it himself, and I with his hat off. He hesitated, and described the proceedings of the committee. Finally he complied, and was allowed to perform his duty."

[Salmon's Hist. American Loyalists.]

Tradition declares that in the worst moment attended upon this scene Mr. Paine's wife was either knocked, or fell off. But as it never—been that she had died 1775, as much as he had done himself. He never was one again. The new government was in question, he gave to one of his negro slaves, named 'Worcester.'

In the earlier days of the Revolution, some American soldiers quartered at his house, treated his, perhaps too exuberantly unworldly, hospitality, and so excited the intensity of their very misapprehension towards him, by cutting the throat of his faithful parrot.

"He was a member of the General Court for some years and a short Government man, in the controversies in that body which preceded the Revolution."

[Salmon's Hist. Am. Loyalists.]
"In 1762, a remonstrance offered by the House of Representatives, to the Royal Governor, against a tax, imposed without his consent, contained the following passages: "For it would be of little consequence to the people, whether they were subject to George or Louis, the King of Great Britain, or the French King, if both were arbitrary, as both would be, if both could levy taxes without parliament."

When these words were first read in the House, Timothy Paine, Esq., a member from Worcester, in his zeal for royalty, though a very worthy, and very amiable man, cried out "Treason! Treason!" The House however was not intimidated, but voted the remonstrance, with all the treason contained in it, by a large majority, and it was presented to the Governor. The Governor was so displeased with this disloyal message, that he sent it back, with a letter to the Speaker, praying it might not be entered on the records of the House. Upon reading this letter, the same person who had before cried out "Treason! Treason!" when the offensive words were first read, now cried out, "Raise them! Raise them!" They were accordingly expunged.¹⁸

[Adams' Diary—letter to Wm. Tudor.]

"The number and variety of offices which Timothy Paine held exhibit the estimation in which he stood. He was Clerk of the Courts from 1750 to 1754; Register of Probate from 1756 to 1761; Register of Deeds from 1761 to 1778; Member of the Executive Council of the Province from 1766 to 1775; in 1774 he was appointed one of his Majesty's Mandamus Counsellors, declined as above related; Selectman from 1755 to 1763, and from 1765 to 1774; Town Clerk from 1753 to 1763; and Representative many years to the General Court.

Solid talents, practical sense, candor, sincerity, affability and mildness, were the characteristics of his life, which closed July 17th, 1793, at the age of 63 years."

Obituary.

"Died."] In this town, on the 17th inst., the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esq. "Long will his death be lamented, and his memory venerated. His mind, from Nature, good, was improved by a liberal education, and by much experience in public and private life. His talents were solid and useful.

The many who consulted him in their important and confidential concerns, will witness to the soundness of his judgement, and the candor and sincerity of his disposition. He was formed for every virtuous enjoyment of friendship. In the walks of social life he was agreeable to all his acquaintances, and blended the chafic fallacies of wit and humor. In his Family he rekindled the authority and affection of the parent with the familiarity and openness of the friend; and while his dignity demanded a respectful, his affability courted a cheerful attendance from his children and dependants. His profession he was a Christian, and in him Religion appeared in its native form, humble, mild, and charitable, and wholly free from that austerity and gloominess, with which it is too often clothed by superstition and bigotry. At the close of his probation he expressed in an affecting manner, his unshaken faith in the divinity of the Gospel, his confidence in the mercy of God, and his hope of a glorious resurrection from the grave."

[Majbach's Spy, Worcester, July 25th, 1793.]

Mrs. Timothy Paine, or Madame Paine, as she was styled by her contemporaries, from respect to her dignity and position, was a woman of uncommon energy and earnestness. She was noted in her day for her zeal in aiding, as far as was in her power, the followers of the Crown, and in defeating the plans of the rebellious colonists. In her the King of England possessed a most faithful ally. In her hands his dignity was safe, and no insult offered to it in her presence, could go unrevenged. Her wit and loyalty never shone more conspicuously, than on the following occasion:

"When President John Adams was a young man, he was invited to dine with the Court and Bar, at the house of Judge Paine, an eminent loyalist of Worcester. When the wine was circulated round the table, Judge Paine gave as a toast, "the King." Some of the Whigs were about to refuse to drink it, but Mr. Adams whispered to them to comply, saying, "We shall have an opportunity to return the compliment." At length when he was desired to give a toast, he gave "the Devil." As the host was about to resent the supposed indignity, his wife calmed him, and turned the laugh upon Mr. Adams, by immediately exclaiming, "My dear, as the gentleman has been so kind as to drink to our king, let us by no means refuse, in our turn, to drink to his."

* The residence of this branch of the Paine Family at Worcester, may perhaps be regarded as the birthplace of any now belonging to the name. The illustrious house, however, dated its origin, long before the Revolution, and has obtained shelter to five generations of the Family. It has had but two real founders, the great-grandfather and grandfather. "It dates up Lane Street, and north of the Lane Old Mansion is 'The Oaks,' the oldest nursery-seat of the Paine Family. My Father told me it has never changed hands, his knowledge, it was Timothy Paine, if I remember aright, who first bought it here. He held it for the public offices, and when the Revolution was projected, considering the royal government. The people took a more patriotic view of the matter, than he did, gathered around his house in great numbers, and thus induced him to relinquish the appointment. My Father said he never knew Mr. Paine, but that he knew his son, Dr. William Paine; that he was in England when the war broke out, and for some reason, which I do not now remember, did not return home, but joined the British army in the capacity of surgeon. After the war was over, however he returned home, and in some way regained possession of his confiscated estate, which has been in the Paine Family ever since, a part of which is the splendid hill now covered with forest, which the east of the house, known as the Himmings, and which will one day be a feature of the Park [Call's Tour, Worcester Fallblades].

† Colonel John Murray, referred to above, was nearly related to the Murrys, Dukes of Athol; his father, a principal man in his country, and one of the country gentlemen, or colonial noblemen, who lived upon their estates in a manner which has passed away.

[Salton's Hist. Am. Loyalists.]

He was, likewise, fifth daughter of Hon. John Chandler, of Worcester and sister Mrs. Timothy Paine. There were seven of these sisters, and, from the first three, she had children, who were in their day called "the everlasts." A very fine full-length portrait of Mr. Murray, by J. S. Copley, R. A., is in the possession of the Chandler family at Lancaster, Mass.

‡ Mr. Adams compares this scene with a similar one which occurred three years afterwards in the U. S. House of Representatives, when the Speaker cried "Treason!" during a warm and disloyal speech from Patrick Henry.

52. GENEALOGY OF THE PAINE FAMILY OF EASTHAM, MASS.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

From a liberal information received, a few errors and omissions have been discovered in certain portions of this article. Under this head, published in the Appendix of the Register, which has suggested the propriety of re-writing and printing such portions, in order to make the necessary corrections, as follows:

The introductory statement, in relation to the origin of the Paine family in Eastham, should be corrected so as to read as follows:

THOMAS PAINE, the remote ancestor of this family, emigrated with others to this country from the county of Kent, England, bringing with him a son Thomas, then a lad of some ten or twelve years of age, and landing at Plymouth in 1621. He is supposed to have made his ultimate residence in Yarmouth, Mass., at some time prior to 1643, where probably he spent the remainder of his days.

THOMAS PAINE the younger, the lad of some ten or twelve years of age, when he landed with his father at Plymouth in 1621, having married Mary Snow, settled in Eastham as early as in 1665, which was very soon after the date of the first settlement in that town. From these two—Thomas Paine from the county of Kent, and Mary Snow his wife, the daughter also of an emigrant from England, and probably she herself an emigrant, originated the Eastham family of Paines which form the subject of this article.

1, 6, 2, should be corrected so as to read as follows: ISAAC PAINE, son of Joshua Paine, m. Abigail Snow, in 1762; resided in Eastham; died March 21, 1810. Children—1, Phebe; 2, Ebenezer; 3, Thomas; 4, Abigail (m. Joseph Lincoln); 5, Joshua; 6, Isaac; 7, Mercy.

Hartsel Nickerson); 3, Abigail (m. Luther Snow); 4, Lucania (m. Samuel Higgins); 5, Samuel (d. young); 6, Thomas (m. Truro). (Ruth, who m. James Gould, had 7 children, 5 of whom are now married and settled in Eastham; so also Sarah, who m. Hartsel Nickerson, had 6 children, 3 of whom are now married and also settled in Eastham. The family name of Paine, however, of this family, is believed to be extinct in Eastham.)

THE PAINE FAMILY REGISTER, OR GENEALOGICAL NOTES AND QUERIES.

No. 4.] Albany, N. Y., Oct. 1, 1857.

55.] TO SUBSCRIBERS.

This number of the REGISTER completes the first year of its publication, and it consequently becomes necessary to decide the question of its future continuance.

Had the work been undertaken with a view to pecuniary profit, its success in that respect would scarcely afford sufficient encouragement for its further appearance; but as far other motives induced the undersigned to commence the publication, he is not inclined to be discouraged by the want of that full measure of support which he hoped it would receive.

Leaving out of view, therefore, the financial aspect of the question, there are, on the other hand, various considerations that seem to render it undesirable to terminate so speedily the career of this "family journal." Some of the objects which it was proposed to accomplish by its means, have been in a very considerable degree promoted thereby. It is believed that an interest in the subject of family history and antiquities has been awakened in the minds of some who were before indifferent—and others have been stimulated to increased zeal in the cause. A large amount of interesting information throwing light upon the early history of the family has been collected, considerable portions of which have been made accessible, through its pages, to many who have desired just that kind of enlightenment respecting their ancestry, but knew not where to obtain it. It has served to combine the efforts of a number of individuals in a manner which promises, if continued, to secure from loss and forgetfulness whatever memorials yet remain of all the principal branches of the "House of Paine."

But in none of these particulars is the work of the REGISTER completed. It is in fact only fairly begun, and in compliance therefore with the expressed wish of divers correspondents and his own inclinations, the undersigned has concluded to continue its publication for at least another year. If those who have already given it their support will continue their subscriptions, and make some little effort in its behalf among their friends, the writer will be secured from pecuniary loss, which is all that he desires for himself.

It would be a source of great satisfaction however, and a great advantage to the cause to which the REGISTER is devoted, if something should be realized from its publication over and above the cost of printing, and which might be devoted to such researches as necessarily involve more or less expense. Whatever has been accomplished in that department, has been done, so far, at the writer's own charge, aided to some extent by funds entrusted to him for that purpose. No genealogy can be satisfactorily traced out or authenticated, without patient and careful searchings among the early town, church, probate and other records, that are in many cases still preserved, but not always easily accessible. It is gratifying to know that in these archives we yet possess the means of supplying many necessary links in the chain of descent, and of verifying or correcting by authentic documentary evidence many traditional statements. But to derive from them the valuable aid they may be made to furnish, requires some expenditure of time, labor and money. Much can be done in this way at a moderate outlay, if judiciously expended, and it was hoped that the receipts from subscriptions to the REGISTER would do something towards extending the explorations referred to.

The fifth number will be issued on the first of January next. The terms of subscription will remain the same: ONE DOLLAR for four numbers. The friends of the enterprise will confer a favor by remitting their dues previous to that time.

Subscribers who desire it will be furnished with the four numbers already published, at Fifty Cents the set, as long as any remain on hand.

Correspondents are requested to continue their contributions of genealogical information of every kind.

All communications to be addressed to 56.] EARLY EMIGRATIONS FROM ENGLAND.

A valued and zealous contributor to the REGISTER, in a private letter recently received, writes on the subject of the origin of the early families of our name in New England, as follows:

"As the result of the investigations into this matter, so far, it appears most probable that the PAINES of New England are principally derived from the south-eastern part of England, and that there were three principal and distinct heads of emigration between the years 1621 and 1640, from whom the greater part of the name in the northern and eastern states have descended.

The first of these heads, the Zestham family, came from Kent co., England; the second from Suff. & Essex, and settled in Delaware; and the third from Northfolk co., and settled in Rhode Is. These counties, with Essex and Sussex, form a line of sea-coast entirely landlocked on the east by the North sea and on the south by the British Channel. Beginning at the head of this column of emigration, we find them arranged in the following order: Northfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Kent, and Sussex. The river Thames separates Essex from Kent. In Northfolk and Sussex we find the towns of Birmingham, Norwich, Lynn, Southwold, Framlingham, Yarmouth, Ipswich, &c. In the county of Kent, Gillingham, Canterbury, Sandwich, &c., &c., particularly with the names of places in which our ancestors settled, and some of which they assisted in planting on two or three islands upon these shores. This fact is corroborative of other evidence as to the parts of the old country from which they came. It is noteworthy also that the name is still frequent in those counties lying nearest to France and occupied by the followers of William the Conqueror and their descendants, among whom undoubtedly the PAINES are to be reckoned."

Additions to the previous article on the Paines of Worcester will be given hereafter. At present we shall enumerate the descendants of the Hon. Timothy and Madam Paine, in the order of family seniority.

Vth Generation; WILLIAM, eldest of the ten children of Timothy Paine and Sarah Chandler, his wife, and whose descendants constitute the senior branch of the family, was born June 5th, 1750, at Worcester. One of his early instructors was President John Adams, who taught a school in Worcester, while reading law in the office of the Hon. James Putnam.

"He graduated at Harvard College, Cambridge, in 1768. His name stands the second in a class of more than forty, when they were arranged according to the dignity of families."^{*}

He studied medicine with the venerable Dr. Edward A. Holyoke, of Salem, Mass., and commenced practice in Worcester, in 1771. In that year Mr. Adams re-visited Worcester, and notes his impression of his former pupil:

"June 2, Sunday. Heard Mr. Wheeler, late minister of Harvard, at Worcester, all day. Here I saw many faces much altered since I first knew this place, which is now sixteen years. Here I saw many young gentlemen who were my scholars and pupils when I kept school here:—John Chandler, Esq., of Petersham; Rufus Chandler, the lawyer; Dr. William Paine, who now studies physic with Dr. Holyoke of Salem; Nat. Chandler, who studies law with Mr. Putnam; and Dr. Thad. Maccarty, who is now in the practice of physic at Dudley; most of these began to learn Latin with me.

"I drank tea at Mr. Putnam's with Mr. Paine, Mrs. Paine, Dr. Holyoke's lady, and Dr. Billy Paine. The Doctor is a very civil, agreeable, and sensible young gentleman."[†]

Subsequent to this he contracted an alliance, thus announced:

MARRIED.] At Salem, on the 23d inst., Dr. William Paine, eldest son of the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esq., of this place, to Miss Lois Orne, daughter of Mr. Timothy Orne, deceased; a young Lady with a fortune of 3000 pounds sterling. [Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Sept. 30, 1773.]

Dr. Paine inherited the loyal feelings of his family, and early identified himself with the royal cause, in the advance of the colonies towards rebellion.

On the 20th of June, 1774, "one of the boldest and most indignant remonstrances of the friends of royal government among the productions of the time,"[‡] was made by the fifty-two loyalists, out of the two hundred and fifty legal voters of Worcester, against the treasonable doings of the Whigs of that town and elsewhere. It was the joint production of Dr. Paine and his uncle, the Hon. James Putnam, "the distinguished counsellor, who had already exerted the whole force of his eloquence to prevent the co-operation of the town in acts of rebellion, but without success."[§] This loyal protest consists of many sections, and after inveighing bitterly against the many outrages already perpetrated by the Whigs, and enumerating some, such as the "loss of immense value lately belonging to the East India Company, and not long since scandalously destroyed in Boston," ends thus:

"These and all such enormities, we detest and abhor; and the authors of them we esteem enemies to our King and Country, violators of all law and civil liberty, the malevolent disturbers of the peace of society, subverters of the established Constitution, and enemies of mankind."

[Massachusetts Gazette, Bolton, June 30, 1774.]

These sentiments form a summary of the political creed of the Paine family, and as may be supposed, this spirited and loyal protest, was refused acceptance by the town, where the rebellious Whigs far outnumbered the loyal Tories. Nevertheless, the loyal town-clerk, Mr. Clark Chandler, a son of the Hon. John Chandler and Dorothy Paine, his wife, and double first cousin to the subject of this notice, influenced more by feeling than prudence, inserted a copy of the protest in the town records.

The first knowledge the Whigs had of sentiments so loyal existing on the same pages with their own patriotic declarations, was derived from the Boston newspapers, whither the recorded protest had been sent for publication.

Dismayed and mortified, the town assembled, and after denouncing in a long preamble, and in no measured terms, the protest and the authors of it, finally

"Resolved, That the Town Clerk do, in presence of the town, obliterate, efface, or otherwise deface, the said recorded protest, and the names thereto subscribed, so that it may become utterly illegible and unintelligible.

"Resolved, That the signers of said protest, on some of whom the Town has conferred many favors, and consequently might expect their kindness, and best services, be deemed unworthy of holding any Town office or honour, until they have made satisfaction for their offence to the acceptance of the Town, which ought to be made as public as the protest was.

"Resolved, That it is highly needful that those of the signers who have not made satisfaction as aforesaid, should be known in future, it is therefore necessary that their names should be inserted as follows, viz:

JAMES PUTNAM,
WILLIAM PAINE,
ISAAC MOORE,
JOHN WALKER,
JOSHUA JOHNSON.

"Resolved, That the following admonition be given to the Town Clerk, Mr. Clark Chandler: Whereas, [&c., &c.]

At a Town meeting held in Worcester, on the 22d day of August, 1774, and continued by adjournment to the 17th of October, the foregoing, being read, paragraph by paragraph, was accepted by the Town.

Attest, CLARK CHANDLER,
Town Clerk.

[Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Dec. 8, 1774.]

All record of the loyal protest was effectually consigned to oblivion. The work of the pen not being satisfactory in defacing its own traces, Mr. Chandler's fingers were dipped in ink, and drawn over it. The protest still remains on the Worcester records—as "utterly illegible and unintelligible" as the most exigent patriot could demand.

Prior to the adjourned town meeting, all the protesters, with the above exceptions, had given the satisfaction demanded. Their recantations were extorted by a force too powerful to admit of refusal. Some who long refused to make submission, were waylaid and cruelly beaten. Prolonged resistance would have been martyrdom.

Long before the above public announcement of his being "deemed unworthy of holding any town office or honour," Dr. Paine had bid farewell to the remote possibility of attaining to any the patriotic town of Worcester could bestow, and anticipated the contingent probability of his falling a victim to the popular rage against him by sailing for England.

The court dress in which he was first presented to his royal master, was long preserved as a souvenir of his exile. At this visit and in his after visits to England, he was a frequent attendant in the drawing-room at St. James'. At this time, too, he formed among others, a friendship afterwards ripened into an intimacy long preserved, with the Finch family. The enjoyment of the nearest intercourse with various members of this noble family (Earls of Winchelsea and Nottingham), was not one of the least pleasing incidents of it, and after periods of expatriation, and in later years was often referred to, as having made exile more tolerable, and the deprivation of family and home less acutely felt.

He sailed from England in the spring of 1775, in company with his cousin, Mr. William Chandler, and arrived in this country on the first of May. The advent of her "unworthy" son was duly made known to the good town of Worcester by the observant Spy.

He arrived, but to say hail, and farewell. The war had broken out, and he had been denounced as a Royalist and an Absentee. At this early moment timely concessions would have restored him to his family, friends and fortune. But he remained true to his allegiance, and to those loyal feelings which breathed in the protest of the year 1766. He immediately re-embarked for Europe. He left his family unvisited, his property for confiscation, and his name for insertion on the list of those designated as enemies of their country.

He had designed to avail himself of the advantages and means of improvement afforded by foreign institutions, till the conflict should terminate—as he supposed it would, in the entire subjugation of the rebels. But on the first of November, 1775, as the contest between Great Britain and the colonies began to assume a more dignified and equal aspect, he accepted a commission as Surgeon in the army, joined the Royal forces in America, and served in New York and Rhode Island.

In January, 1781, he again sailed for Europe in company with Lord Winchelsea, and visited the continent. After remaining there some time he embarked from Lisbon for England, and in October was admitted Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, and his name was enrolled among those of the practitioners of London. On his return to New York in the following year, he attained the summit of his profession, being appointed by the English commander-in-chief, Sir Guy Carleton, on the 5th of October, 1782, Surgeon-General to the army.

He was stationed at Halifax, Nova Scotia, until the troops were reduced at the close of the war, when he retired on half-pay.

And now when the game of war was over, he found himself upon the losing side. The successful treason of his former fellow-countrymen, now enabled them to dictate to the men, to whom, as the loyal protest of 1774 declared, "they looked up to with envy, and on whose fall and ruin they wished to rise." That expatriation, which had before been from choice, had now become a necessity with him and a number of his race sufficient to form a large family party. For in the year 1775, there flamed in the columns of every provincial newspaper, and in handbills posted around the streets of every provincial town and village, the following proclamation, one copy of which was transmitted to every legislative assembly in the Union, and five hundred to the American Ministers at the Court of France:

STATE OF MASSACHUSETTS BAY.

In the Year of our LORD one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight.

An Act to prevent the return to this State of certain persons therein named, and others who have left this State, or either of the United States, and joined the enemies thereof:

WHEREAS, John Chandler, Esquire; James Putnam, Esquire; William Paine, Physician; William Chandler, Gentleman; Rufus Chandler, Gentleman; Nathaniel Chan-dlar, Gentleman; Gardner Chandler, Merchant, of Worcester, in the county of Worcester; John Murray, Esquire, of Rutland, in said county of Worcester, and many other persons, who have left this State or some other of the United States of America, and joined the enemies thereof:

Thereby not only depriving these States of their personal services at a time when they ought to have afforded their utmost aid in defending the said States against the invasions of a cruel enemy, but manifesting an inimical disposition to the said States, and a design to aid and abet the enemies thereof to their wicked purposes. And whereas many dangers may accrue to this State, and the United States, if such persons should be again admitted to reside in this State:

Be it therefore enacted by the Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, That if the said John Chandler, James Putnam, William Paine, William Chandler, Rufus Chandler, &c., &c., [Massachusetts Spy, October 29, 1778.]

The Act proceeds to declare, in many sections, and with unmistakable meaning, that if any of the above delinquents and others not here mentioned, should return to their native State, they should be transported back "into some port or place within the dominions, or in the possession of the forces, of the King of Great Britain." Should they voluntarily return a second time, they were to "suffer the pains of death without the benefit of clergy." Furthermore, the master of any ship bringing them into any port of the State, or any person harboring or concealing them within the State, was to "forfeit the sum of five hundred pounds." Finally, directions are given for the universal publication and distribution of the act, as above.

Consequent upon this decree, Dr. Paine gathered the members of his scattered family around him, and in June, 1784, took possession of the island of La Tete, in the bay of Passamaquoddy, granted him by the British Government for his services, and erected a mansion there with a view to permanent residence. The solitude of this situation not proving agreeable to his family, he removed, and entered into the practice of his profession, in the city of St. John, New Brunswick.

In 1785 he was elected member of the House of Assembly of New Brunswick, from the county of Charlotte, and chosen chief clerk of that body. The office of Deputy Surveyor-General of the King's Forests in America, was also conferred upon him by his friend, Sir John Wentworth, Bart., Governor of Nova Scotia.

The act of banishment having been rescinded, he returned in the summer of 1787, by permission of the English War Department, to Salem, Mass. He remained there in the enjoyment of a lucrative practice, till the death of his father, in 1790, when he returned to Worcester, and took possession of the family estate.

Since his first departure from his native place, times had completely changed. He did not now come back as one of "those victims of war, emissaries of tyranny, crawling out of Boston to his father's seat in Worcester, there to avail himself of the compassion of the people in order to play his party or by some method weaken the Union, or form some diabolical plan for the Ministry to save the supremacy of Parliament, under some soft, sophistical, reconciliatory terms."

All hope of a better state of things, for him, was now over, and he resigned himself from necessity to what he was still unacquainted to him, taste and triumph—a republican form of government. The revolution seemed no longer to have been a mere contest of two warring armies, but a struggle for the rights of the people, and he, as much as he had no remaining to those natives who wished to "have afterwards permission to reside in the town of

Worcester, regained the confidence, and long enjoyed the respect and esteem of the community.¹

The great, and only offence of his life, loyalty to his sovereign, was forgiven.

On the formation of the American Antiquarian Society in 1812, he was elected its first Vice-President. He afterwards delivered an address before the society, pronounced in King's Chapel, Boston, on their third anniversary, October 23, 1815²—which was published by request.

In the year 1823, he ceased to be a British subject, a special act being passed in that year, by the legislature, granting to him, by name, the rights of an American citizen. Of this privilege he never availed himself, except to hold property in his own name, hitherto retained in the nominal possession of his brother, the Hon. Judge Paine. His loyal principles remained unshaken, and influenced by those conservative feelings which are the natural accompaniment of the former, he bequeathed his landed property to a generation other than that immediately succeeding him, thus ensuring its longer possession by those bearing his name.

He died April 19th, 1833, aged 83, at the Oaks, Worcester,—an inflexible Royalist to the last, and verifying in his own case the truth of the saying, once often repeated, that "Loyalist half-pay officers never die."

Dr. Paine was an M. D. of Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1775, and an Honorary M. D. of Harvard College, Cambridge, 1818; Vice-President and Councillor of the American Antiquarian Society, and Fellow of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries of Copenhagen; Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences; Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians of London; Member of the Linnean, Essex Historical, Massachusetts and London Medical Societies; etc., etc.

"He possessed extensive professional learning, and refined literary taste, and was equally respected as a physician and a citizen."³

To a disposition the most benevolent and disinterested, and to a fund of knowledge and anecdote extensive and versatile, combined with an ever readiness to exercise the former for the convenience and accommodation, as he was the latter for the instruction and gratification of those around him, and which ever made him a wished for companion and a valued friend, Dr. Paine united in an eminent degree, a courtly grace of diction, and a refined courtesy of manner, invariable, yet unstudied, and shown alike on all occasions, and to all conditions, to the youthful as to the aged, to those of low as to those of high estate.

The qualities of a "very civil, agreeable, and sensible" gentleman did not the less eminently distinguish him in later than in early years, strengthened, polished, and refined as they afterwards were, by the enjoyment of the finest society, extensive travel, and an intimate acquaintance with mankind and the world, added to these advantages which result to character and manners, from contact with the rigid discipline of the camp, and the refining etiquette of the court; qualities often the growth and characteristic of those institutions for which he entertained a devoted and chivalrous attachment, and which in him had their birth, under, survived, and long outlived the downfall of our ancien régime.

An incident which occurred during his last hours, well illustrates his never ceasing regard for the comfort and welfare of others, even in matters for such a moment, of small import, when he himself was the great and entire object of solicitude to those around him, and renders a remark, made under similar circumstances, on one of the most shining characters of his own or any age, not wholly inapplicable to him.—His good breeding only quitted him with his life.⁴

His portrait by Harding, and a miniature, are in the possession of the family.

STATISTICS.

A correspondent who has a fondness for statistical studies, has been making some inquiries with a view to ascertain the proportion which the PAINES bear to other names in the population generally and in various professions and conditions of life. His inquiries embrace, of course, all the various orthographies, and the results which he promises to communicate in an article for the REGISTER will doubtless exhibit some interesting and curious details.

While waiting for the more complete report, we venture to state, in advance, a few of the approximations at which he has already arrived.

From an examination of all the principal Directories of New York and New England, it appears that the PAINES in those cities and towns are as 1 to about 1700. According to the latest Business Directories of the same states, the proportion of PAINES in the rural districts is rather larger than in the cities, being about 1 to 1600. Of the 20,000 post-masters in the United States, twenty bear our family name. Livingston's Law Register for 1856 contains the names of 30,000 lawyers in the United States. More than 30 are PAINES. In the clerical and medical professions the proportion appears to be still larger. Of the graduates of colleges we can claim about 1 in 1100. Of United States pensioners for military services, 1 in 1000.

These figures will probably require some correction, but they will serve to convey a tolerable idea of the numerical importance of our race, until more extended and accurate results are obtained. Any facts bearing upon this subject will be thankfully received.

59.] WIVES OF STEPHEN PAINE OF REHOBOTH.

According to the Rehoboth Town Record, Rose, the wife of STEPHEN PAINE, Sen., died Jan. 20, 1660.

In 1662 he married Mrs. ANNE PARKER, widow of William Parker. Stephen Paine, Sen., died in 1679, and in his will, dated July 15th, of that year.—Art. [33]—provision is made for his wife "ELIZABETH," and hence the inference was drawn.—Art. [32]—that he must have married a third time. A comparison of dates, however, makes it certain that his second wife, Anne, outlived him two or three years—see her will.—Art. [35]. How to reconcile this apparent discrepancy, has been the subject of no little cogitation.

A correspondent, whose experience ought to make his opinion authoritative in questions of this kind, states that the names Pier and Pear both were sometimes used by our ancestors interchangeably. If that is the case, the difficulty in this instance is easily explained, and the progenitor of the "Rehoboth" family is acquitted of having married more than twice.

RECENT ITEMS.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention, which lately met at Columbus, has nominated H. B. Payne as the candidate of that party for Governor.

Memphis, Tenn., June 5.

Gen. Walker arrived here this morning and was welcomed to his native state by Chief Judge of this city. The speeches of Gen. Walker and Col. Lockridge in reply were in substance the same as those delivered at New Orleans.

Byron Paine has been appointed by the Governor of Wisconsin, Judge of Milwaukee county, to fill a vacancy. The Cleveland (Ohio) Herald remarks thereon as follows:

"Mr. Paine is a son of Gen. James H. Paine, well known to the people of Lake county, and we are glad to learn that father and son are gaining true reputations, and making their mark well and nobly in Wisconsin."

Among the passengers who were rescued from the wreck of the "Central America" steamship, which foundered at sea on the night of the 12th ult., were Theodore Payne, Esq., of San Francisco, and Mr. Theodore Payne, of Stamford, Conn. Mr. Theodore Payne's published statement of the terrible disaster, is remarkably clear and explicit. He was one of the last to leave the ship before she sunk, and only went off at Capt. Herndon's earnest request. Before leaving, the Captain placed in his hands his gold watch and chain with an injunction to carry them to his wife.

A late number of the Mediam (N. Y.) Observer contains an obituary of Mr. Ruggles Payne, the oldest resident of Nelson, in that county. He died at his residence in that town, on the 24th ult., at the age of 88 years. He came from the town of Ashfield, Mass., in the year 1797, and resided ever since on the spot on which he died.

H. D. PAINE, M. D.:

Litchfield, Conn., July 9, 1857.

Dear Sir—In the second number of your "Paine Family Register," article 26, mention is made of "Mr. John Paine," Governor of "Sophy Manor" in Rhode Island, in 1691. As my Payne (or Paine) ancestors were a Rhode Island family, I am curious to know if my pedigree may not, by some possibility, be traced to the gentleman in question.

My great-grandfather, PAYNE KENYON, a native of Rhode Island, was married in New London, Conn., in 1755, to Lucy Minor, and dying a year after, left an only son of the same name, whom I well remember. The mother of the first mentioned Payne Kenyon was (as I have understood from my grandfather) Sally Payne. The Christian name of her father, as well as of her husband, I am ignorant of.

Perhaps some of your intelligent correspondents in Rhode Island can aid me in my researches.

I am delighted with the plan of your Family Register, and the ability with which it is conducted, and wish you abundant success. Yours truly,

PAYNE KENYON KILBOURNE.

It appears that "Chelatewasett" or Prudence Island, which in 1691 was erected into an independent government under the name of "Sophy Manor," and of which "Mr. John Paine, merchant, of London," the gentleman referred to in the above communication, was appointed governor for life (see Art. [26]), was in his possession several years before. In 1663, Jan. 29, according to the Suffolk county (Mass.) Records, the island was mortgaged by John Paine to L. Appleton for £1500. No further particulars relating to the history of this island or to "Governor" Paine or his descendants, if any, have been received.

DIED at Sturbridge, on the 22d inst, Miss PERCY PAINE, eldest daughter of the Rev. Joshua Paine of this [that] town, in the 24th year of her age; of whom it may be said without flattery or exaggeration, that she exhibited through life an amiable pattern of filial obedience, and sisterly tenderness, of the greatest sincerity and uprightness—and that she adorned her Christian profession by the whole assemblage of the virtues and graces of Christianity, the efficacy of which enabled her in her lingering sickness to possess her soul in the greatest patience, and to meet the King of Terrors with fortitude and calmness. Respect and sympathy for the distressed family, and an affectionate esteem for the deceased, brought together a large concourse of people to attend the funeral on Monday last, on which occasion a sermon was preached in the meeting-house by the Rev. Mr. Williams, of Brimfield, from Psalm xlii, 10 v: Be still and know that I am GOD.

66.] EXTRACTS FROM OLD NEWSPAPERS.

DIED at Sturbridge, on the 22d inst., Miss POLLY PAINE, eldest daughter of the Rev. Joshua Paine of this [that] town, in the 24th year of her age; of whom it may be said without flattery or exaggeration, that she exhibited through life an amiable pattern of filial obedience, and sisterly tenderness, of the greatest sincerity and uprightness—and that she adorned her Christian profession by the whole assemblage of the virtues and graces of Christianity, the efficacy of which enabled her in her lingering sickness to possess her soul in the greatest patience, and to meet the King of Terrors with fortitude and calmness. Respect and sympathy for the distressed family, and an affectionate esteem for the deceased, brought together a large concourse of people to attend the funeral on Monday last, on which occasion a sermon was preached in the meeting-house by the Rev. Mr. Williams, of Brimfield, from Psalm xlvii, 10 v: Be still and know that I am GOD.

67.] ROBERT TREAT PAINE.

In answer to repeated inquiries made respecting the origin and pedigree of this distinguished individual, known to all as one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, we have selected and arranged the following well authenticated facts derived from various sources.

ROBERT TREAT PAINE was a descendant of Thomas Paine, who emigrated to this country from the county of Kent, in England, in the year 1621 (or thereabouts, as accounts vary a little on this subject), and landed at Plymouth, in the then colony of Plymouth, now Massachusetts. He brought with him a son, named Thomas Paine also, then a lad of some ten or twelve years of age, and whether any other family is unknown. The elder Thomas Paine is believed to have settled at an early date at Yarmouth, Barnstable co., Mass., and to have been one of the first deputies from that town to the first general court of the colony of Plymouth.

The younger Thomas Paine, married Mary Snow, and settled in Eastham, in Barnstable co., about the year 1655, and became the head of a large family, since designated as the "Eastham family of Paines." During a long residence, of more than half a century in this town, he appears to have enjoyed largely the confidence of his fellow citizens, and filled almost every station of honor and trust which they could confer upon him. His children were; Samuel, Thos., Elisha, John, Nicholas, James, Joseph, Elizer, Mary, and Dorcas.

JAMES PAINE, the sixth son of Thomas Paine, sen., of Eastham, and grandfather of Robert Treat Paine, married Bethish Thatcher, in 1691, and settled in the town of Barnstable, Barnstable co., Mass. He had a family of seven children, though but one surviving son, named Thomas, who afterwards became the Rev. Thomas Paine, pastor of a church in Weymouth, Mass., and the father of Robert Treat Paine.

On the maternal side he was the great grand-son of Gov. ROBERT TREAT, of Milford, Conn. Gov. Treat's eldest son, Rev. Samuel Treat, was the first pastor of the church in Eastham, Mass. He married Miss Elizabeth Mayo, daughter of Rev. John Mayo of Boston, in 1671, by which he had eleven children, six sons and five daughters, the last married in Eastham; among the former was one named Robert. Mrs. Treat died, in 1699, aged 44 years. In 1700 Mr. Treat married again, the widow Abigail Fernald, daughter of Rev. Samuel Willard, pastor of the South Church, Boston, by which he had three children, the eldest of whom, Miss Esther Treat, married Rev. Thos. Paine, of Weymouth, and became the mother of Robert Treat Paine. From this statement it will readily be perceived from whence he derived his name.

Rev. Thomas Paine, of Weymouth, as above stated, married Miss Eunice Treat at Boston, April 21st, 1721, according to the Boston records, and from the same authority we learn that Robert Treat Paine, was born March 12, 1750 (1751?).

Having thus brought up the pedigree of Robert Treat Paine to his birth, we will conclude this article with his early training from the Encyclopaedia Americana.

PAINE, ROBERT TREAT, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born in Boston, in 1751. His father had been for some time pastor of a church in Weymouth, near Boston, but in consequence of ill health, he had removed to the latter place, where he engaged in mercantile pursuits. When fourteen years old, he became a student in Harvard College, and, after leaving it, kept, for a period, a public school, the fortune of his father having been greatly reduced. He contributed, in this way, to the support of his parents, and likewise made a voyage to Europe, with a view of acquiring ampler means for their maintenance. In 1755, he acted as chaplain to the troops of the provinces at the northward, he having previously studied theology. Not long afterwards, however, he devoted his attention to the law, and, during the prosecution of his studies, again kept a school for his support. On being admitted to the bar, he established himself at Taunton, in the county of Bristol, where he resided for many years. In 1762, he was chosen a delegate from that town to the convention called by the leading men of Boston, in consequence of the abrupt dissolution of the general court by Gov. Bernard. In 1770, he conducted the prosecution, on the part of the crown, in the absence of the attorney general, in the celebrated trial of Capt. Preston and his men for the part which they acted in the well known Boston massacre. The way in which he discharged that duty gave him great reputation. In 1773, he was elected a representative to the general assembly from Taunton. He was afterwards chosen a member of the continental congress, which met at Philadelphia, in 1774. The following year, he was re-elected, and rendered important services as chairman of the committee, named for the purpose of introducing the manufacture of saltpetre, which was then but imperfectly understood, while the colonies were suffering for the want of gunpowder; also as a member of a committee for the encouragement of the manufacture of cannon and other implements of war. In 1776, 1777, and 1778, he was also in congress, and, in the intervals of their sessions, filled several important offices in Massachusetts. In 1780, he was sent to the convention which met in order to deliberate respecting a constitution for that commonwealth, and of the committee which framed the instrument he was a conspicuous member. Under the government which was organized, he was appointed attorney general. This office he held until 1790, when he was raised to the bench of the supreme court, where he continued to sit until 1804. He was then seventy-three years old. He died, May 11th, 1814, in the eighty-fifth year of his age.

As a lawyer, Mr. Paine acquired a high rank; his legal attainments were extensive, and his strict fidelity in discharging his duties as attorney general gave him the reputation of unswerving severity. His judicial functions he discharged ably, and with the utmost impartiality. To literary and religious institutions he rendered important services. He was an excellent scholar, and inquisitive of apprehension, liveliness of imagination, and general intelligence, he was inferior to few. His memory was exceedingly retentive. His conversation was distinguished for its spiritfulness; and if he was sometimes fault-finding in railway, he evinced no ill humor at being the subject of it in his turn. He was a founder of the American Academy, established in Massachusetts in 1780, and continued his services to it until his death. The degree of doctor of laws was conferred on him by Harvard College. L. C. PAINE.

ETYMOLOGICAL.

In old Law Dictionaries, the term "Payne" is used to designate a peculiar punishment, which consisted in pressing a criminal to death. What is the origin of the word in this sense, and when was such a punishment in vogue?

69.] SOUTHOLD (L. I.) PAINES.

Genealogy of what has been designated as the "Dedham" branch of the Paine family:

In tracing back the line of ancestral lineage of any family, it is important, not only to ascertain with precision who the original progenitors were, but it is also important to begin the genealogy at a definite period of time in its history.

In the first settlement of our ancestors in this country, such a period is happily presented in the history of what has been designated as the "Dedham" branch of the family of Paines.

Having but recently commenced the investigation of this subject, I have not yet received sufficient information respecting the original "heads" of the family to decide positively who they were, and where they first established themselves.

The evidence we have, as is usual in similar cases, is of a twofold character, traditional and documentary.

And first, in respect to the traditional evidence. We learn from three different sources, that in the early settlement of our ancestors, three brothers emigrated at the same time from England to this country. One statement is, that two of them settled in New England, the other in Southold, L. I. Another is, that one settled in Massachusetts, one in Rhode Island, and the other in Southold. While the third statement (and the most reliable) is, that one is located in Massachusetts, one in New Jersey, and the third in Southold.

These reports agree in the number of persons, three; and in the fact that one of the brothers located in Southold. In regard to the residence of the other two brothers, they give a different version.

Traditional evidence taken alone is usually defective and uncertain, but when it corroborates more reliable data, it becomes truly important, and assists wonderfully in developing that of a more positive character. And the only evidence of this positive kind that I have yet been able to obtain is found in article 17 of the Register. It, doubtless, refers to the heads of this branch of the family. I think so, from the fact that it is about the time when they are supposed to have emigrated to this country; and the number agrees with all the traditional testimony that has been transmitted to us.

The article alluded to informs us that Thomas Payne emigrated with his family from England, and settled in Salem, Mass., before August, 1637. Also, that his son Thomas settled in Dedham about 1640, and the two other sons, Peter and John moved to Southold, L. I. The three brothers came to this country with their father, Thomas at the age of 25, Peter at 21, and John when he was about 17 years of age. After a residence of three years in Salem, Thomas removed to Dedham, and twenty-three years after landing, Peter and John became residents of Southold.

There are "holes still remaining, on a small neck of land, called Hollock's Point, which they are supposed to have made when they landed in 1630."

I am not now in possession of the pedigree of these persons for about seventy years from the time they first settled in Southold. Mr. Charles H. Payne, a resident of that place, is obtaining it and will shortly furnish a complete history of the earliest members, that will fill up this long interval.

In article 22 of the Register, we find the names of Peter and John, mentioned as residents in 1675, and again in 1683. But in 1698 Peter's name is not mentioned.

The first person of whom I have an authentic account, is John Pain, son of Alsop Pain, grandson of John Pain, Jr., and great grandson of John Pain, Sr., who was one of the original settlers in Southold.

JOHN PAIN, son of Alsop, born probably about 1740; died about 1812. Lived all his life in Southold. Married — Frothingham. Wife died several years before her husband. Six children: 1, Stephen; 2, John; 3, Joshua; 4, Ezra; 5, Phineas; 6, David.

I. STEPHEN, born in Southold, 1758; farmer, never married. Lived all his life in Southold. Died many years ago.

II. JOHN, born in Southold in 1769; farmer. Six children: John, Benjamin, Luther, Hannah, Esther, and Cynthia.

III. JOSUA, born in Southold in 1763; farmer. Removed to Whitestown, Oneida co., N. Y., with his brother Ezra, in 1788; married Lois Johnson, in 1793; no children. He was for eight or ten years Justice of the Peace in Whitestown. He died after an illness of four days, from typhoid pleurisy, an epidemic that was peculiarly and rapidly fatal in many parts of the country in 1812. His wife was married the same year, to Deac. John Morse, of Westmoreland. She died 26th January, 1842. A copy of an obituary of this devoted Christian woman has been furnished me.

IV. EZRA, born in Southold, 2d March, 1765-7; farmer. Removed to Whitestown, Oneida co., N. Y., in 1788, married Elizabeth Weeks (sister of the late Wm. R. Weeks, D. D., of Newark, N. J.), in 1790. Four children, two died in infancy: 1, John Alsop; 2, Wm. Weeks.

The whole country west of "Gernan Flats" was called Whitestown, when Ezra moved into it, and it was not until after the birth of his second son that the name of Deerfield was given to the town. So named because many of the early settlers came from a place by that name in Connecticut.

He died in Deerfield, 1st September, 1828, aged 63 years. His widow survived him several years, and died in Newark, N. J., in 1837, aged 74 years. She led a well ordered and consistent Christian life, and her efforts were unwearied in teaching her sons the principles of the Christian religion.

V. I. JENS ATSER, son of Ezra, name derived from father, grandfather, and great grandfather. Born in Whitestown, 10th July, 1795; physician; married Amanda Kellogg, January 15th, 1824. Four children: 1, Horace Marshfield; 2, Cynthia Kellogg; 3, Emily Steel; 4, John Alsop, Jr. He resides at the present time in Clinton, Oneida co., N. Y.

1. Horace M., son of John Alsop, born, Paris Hill, N. Y., November 19th, 1827; physician; married Charlotte Mann, 15th April, 1852. Two children: Nathaniel Emmons, born 14th July, 1853; and Howard Simmons, born 14th July, 1856. Present residence is Clinton, Oneida co., N. Y.

2. Cynthia E., born 19th June, 1829; died, 26th February, 1834.

3. Emily S., born 14th January, 1831; died 26th July, 1836.

4. John A. Jr., son of John Alsop, born Newark, N. J., 14th January, 1840. Is at this time (1857) a member of the junior class in Hamilton College.

IV. 2. William Weeks, son of Ezra, born Deerfield, Oneida co., N. Y., 10th August, 1803; farmer; married Hannah Lee, 1825. Eight children: 1, Mary Ann; 2, Elizabeth; 3, Julia; 4, Cornelia; 5, Hannah; 6, Margaret; 7, Angeline; 8, William. Present residence is in Evansville, Wis.

V. PHINEAS. Have not yet received a correct statement relative to this member of the family. Am informed that he had two sons: Enos and Silas. The latter at present resides in Islip, L. I.; born 1769.

VI. DAVID, born 1772; died 27th September 1855; farmer; married Esther Brown, in 1793-4. Had nine children: 1, David Hazzard; 2, Augustus; 3, John Larrin; 4, Samuel; 5, Esther Brown; 6, Hannah Rackett; 7, Mary; 8, George Hull; 9, Arminia Sophia. He was a farmer, lived and died in Riverhead, L. I. His widow is still living, and resides in Aqueduct, Suffolk co., L. I.

71.] THE PAINES OF WORCESTER, MASS.

In this article we shall continue the account of the descendants of the Hon. Timothy and Madam Paine, in the senior line, and notice briefly one of the families with whom they are allied.

Among the most illustrious of the ancient noble houses of Europe, is that of the princes of Horn and Lausigny.

The splendor of their lineage was unrivaled, and their alliances, always formed with scrupulous care, were contracted with the principal noble families of Europe.

At widely distant periods, the brilliant annals of this house are clouded by two dark tragedies, one of which has rendered memorable the mistaken religious zeal of one of Spain's most catholic kings; the other will ever witness to the disasters which inevitably follow the unbridled stimulated passion for great and sudden gain.

Flying from the persecution which menaced his adherents, attendant upon the downfall of his chief, and endangered by the wrath of Philip of Spain, a cadet of this family, John Horn, crossed the Atlantic and found an asylum in America.

Arriving in the latter part of the seventeenth century, he settled in Salem, Mass., and became the progenitor of a race, numerically small, and representatives of which are rarely met with, who bear his name with its orthography altered in conformity to its European continental pronunciation, to that of Orne.

From him, through a line of intermediate ancestry, always in the first rank for wealth and high social position, and not infrequently noted as ably filling public posts of trust and honor, was descended Lois Orne, who was born February 18, 1756, and married September 23, 1773, to Dr. William Paine. One notice of this marriage we have already seen; elsewhere we read it thus:

MARRIED!—Last week, Dr. WILLIAM PAINE, of Worcester, to Miss LOIS ORNE, daughter of Timothy Orne, Esq., late an eminent Merchant of this place, deceased; a young Lady in the possession of a large Fortune.—[Essex Gazette, Salem, Sept. 28, 1773].

The apparent eccentricity of proclaiming to the world the amount of Miss Orne's fortune, and the seeming paradox of declaring it a large one, was the result in the one case, of the fame which the Orne family enjoyed of being the wealthiest in Salem, and in the other, to the altered standard of wealth in our own, as compared with colonial times. Mr. Orne's fortune of £25,000 sterling was deemed enormous for the period. His last will, made somewhat in accordance with his political principles, gave to his two sons more than half his property; his four daughters shared the remainder.

Like the Paines of Worcester, the Ornes of Salem were devoted royalists; and like the Paines they suffered persecution for royalty's sake. Mr. Timothy Orne, Junior, a brother of Mrs. Paine's, and college classmate of her husband, by the unaccountable clemency of his persecutors, seems to have narrowly escaped paying dearly for his principles, inasmuch as a "mob seized him in 1775, but were induced to relinquish their design of tarring and feathering him."¹

In the days when the degree of "Esquire" lent dignity to the title of "Honorable," when the Paines attired in velvet coats, black satin small clothes, silver buckled shoes, laced ruffles and powdered periwigs, sat in the royal council of the province, endeavoring there to stem the tide of revolution which was about to sweep away forever the ancient landmarks of aristocracy and monarchy, with which they were identified, and which they so much revered; when the chancellors, robed in scarlet gowns and crowned with flowing wigs, frowned from the supreme bench of the judiciary, upon the first faint rising of the approaching storm which was to send them forth, shorn of their ancient and now almost hereditary dignities, exiles and wanderers to a foreign land; in those days Worcester contained but two thousand inhabitants, instead of twenty-five thousand, as it does to-day, and only five carriages. The possession of the latter was shared by the Paines with their kinsmen and allies the Chandlers, and as we shall see hereafter, a mournful reminiscence in the annals of the Paine family, is associated with them.

For thirty years subsequent to the revolution, the Paines of Worcester did not mingle in the society of the town; and for as long a period, before similar circumstances were in the possession of any other family in the place, they were objects, to a certain extent, of wonder and admiration, from making use of what are now few and in every well constituted household, but which were rarely met with a half a century ago—silver knives and forks.

The service of plate, a significant for our own as well as ancient days, which Mrs. Orne brought into the Paine family, attests alike to the nobility of her fortune and to the lustre of her descent, bearing upon it the most reputable blood shield and diadem coronet of the princely house of Horn.²

I am aware that errors will be found in the preceding statement, but from communications recently received from several of its members I am confident that the time is not far distant when the requisite information will be obtained, from which, a complete and accurate history of this branch of the family can be compiled. I do not see any reason for designating this as the "Dulham" branch. Should it not be styled the Southold branch, or rather, as an offshoot from the SALER branch, to which the Dedham branch is also affiliated?

Issue: 1. Joseph Sebastian, born Oct. 8, 1796. Graduate Harvard College, 1819; mayor of Salem, president of the B-ston Horticultural Society, etc.

Esther Orne married 2d, Nov. 5, 1811, Ichabod Tucker, of Worcester, afterwards of Salem; graduate of Harvard College, 1791; Hon. A. M., Yale College, 1804; member Massachusetts Historical Society, etc. She resided principally at Salem, where she died January 29, 1854, aged 80.

Those who recall the stateliness, approaching to hauteur, which characterized this lady in advanced life, and which was not wholly a stranger to her in youth, will find it difficult to realize, that while her father was enjoying the highest professional rank and associating with individuals of the first distinction in the British army, the tenacity of the ruthless whigs could induce them to make strong but ultimately unsuccessful efforts to entrage still more grossly than they had already done, the "dignity" of the ancient and honorable Paine family, by consigning the eldest daughter to her house to the society of potboys and scullions, by putting her out to service in a gentleman's kitchen.

OBITUARY.—On Sunday morning, of the heart complaint, Mrs. ESTHER O. TUCKER, widow of the late Ichabod Tucker, Esq., in the 80th year of her age.

Mrs. Tucker was the daughter of the late Dr. William Paine, of Worcester, and a descendant of the ancient Orne family of Salem; and she enjoyed the best advantages of education in her day. Richly gifted in mind and heart, with lofty principles of fidelity and truthfulness, she became rich in the virtues and solid accomplishments of her sex, and was remarkable for her skill and industry in the use of her powers for the benefit and gratification of others. The strength and generous nature of her affections and the energy of her benevolence and spirit of kindness, with her familiar knowledge of whatever pertained to order, comfort and enjoyment in domestic social life, made her a constant blessing to her family and friends, more especially to such as were less fortunate than herself. To the sick she was a model of tender sympathy and devoted care. She retained the vigorous exercise of her virtues and affections, with all her habitual courtesy and dignity of manner, to the last week, if not day, of her long and exemplary life. Her death has made a painful chasm in a wide circle of affectionate and strongly attached friends and relatives, to whom her memory will always be dear. And she may still prove a blessing to them in their remembrance and imitation of her Christian virtues.—Sab. A Gazette, Feb. 4, 1854.

II. HAMMER, was born Nov. 13, 1775; died Dec. 20, 1778. III. HAMMER, was born Nov. 21, 1779, at Newport, R. I. She married March 17, 1802, Joseph Warner Rouse, of Antigua, West Indies, an English landed proprietor and consul. Issue, nine children, of whom alone survived infancy:

1. Harriet Paine, born Feb. 2, 1801; married July 29, 1826, John Clarke Lee, of Salem, graduate of Harvard College, 1823; Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. Issue, ten children. Rose Smith, 5th child, born Jan. 25, 1835; married Oct. 19, 1854, Lavett Stannistall, of Salem, graduate Harvard College, 1844; an attorney at law. Issue, Lavett and N. G. 3, 1855.

2. Joseph, born Feb. 17, 1815; married May 4, 1842, her third cousin, George Chandler, M. D., Yale College, 1841. Issue, six children in Massachussetts State Land Hospital. Issue, 1. Mary, born Feb. 17, 1845; 2. Harriet Rouse, born June 6, 1847; died July 1, 1857; 3. Fanny, born Jan. 6, 1851.

These young ladies are now the sole representatives bearing the name, upon the scene of its ancient prosperity and pride, of the once all powerful and numerous family of Chandler. Verily:

"As the cloud is consumed and vanisheth away, so he that teeth down to the grave shall come up no more.

"He shall return no more to his house, neither shall his place know him any more."—Job, vii, 9, 10.*

On his return he visited India and various countries of the east. He returned to this country and again proceeded to the east. He resided at first at Canton, China, being connected there with the house of James and Thomas H. Perkins, of Boston. He remained there but a short period, when he proceeded to Port Louis, island of Martinique, and resided there till 1821. From that period his residence was at Batavia, island of Java, where he established a wealthy commercial house, which still bears his name. He died July 21, 1834, at Batavia, unmarried.

75.] LARGE TREES.

Mr. E. H. Little, of Unionville, Conn., has furnished to a Hartford paper, the description of a very large Elm tree, now standing and flourishing in the town of Columbia, Ct., which it is said was set out by a Mr. Joseph Paine, 135 years ago. It is 90 feet high, and is 45 feet in circumference at the ground. From a limb which was broken off two years ago, 650 feet of boards, were sawed. The trunk is believed to be perfectly sound and has a prospect of a long life. Eighty-five years ago, and again within a few years, the tree was struck by lightning, but without serious injury.

OBITUARY NOTICES.

Died on the 17th Sept., 1851, at his residence in Athens, Pa., David Paine, Esq., aged eighty-two. He was a native of Eastham, Cape Cod, Mass., and settled at Troya Point early in the year 1791. Few indeed of his old associates, in the settlement of the country, now remain; yet in the early annals of the beautiful valley, now termed, for more than half a century he made his home. His name will be remembered as one of those identified with its history and improvement. His warm heart and a social disposition, ever won the esteem and love of those who knew him, and although traits like these naturally strengthen man's attachment to life, yet as the increasing infirmities of age warned him of approaching dissolution, he was accustomed to look forward to it as a happy release, evincing at the same time, a spirit of meek resignation to the will of his Heavenly Father.

At Troy, Pennsylvania, on the morning of Thursday, March 1, 1849, Clement Paine, Esq., in the 80th year of his age. He was born in August, 1769, at Eastham, on Cape Cod, which had been the residence of his ancestors since their first arrival in America. Subsequently in Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, and Charleston, S. C., he was engaged in the printing business, to which he was bred. In 1794, he was settled at Athens, Penn., which place was for fifty years his home. He removed from thence to the residence of his son at Troy in December, 1844. The illness which led to his dissolution was of about a week's duration, although his health had for some time been feeble. His remains were taken to Athens for interment. His long career of business pursuits was marked by a degree of system and punctuality, not often met with; his name was widely known and will long be remembered throughout this section of country; and with peculiarities of manner in a greater or less degree to all mankind, he displayed a feeling heart, and a spirit resigned to the dispensations of Providence.

In Portland on Friday evening last, January 21, 1825, Josiah Paine, Esq., aged sixty-five. There is no man perhaps in this state, to whom the public are more indebted than to the deceased. He has been a mail contractor for about thirty years, and had been constantly improving and enlarging the mail routes in this state, until the decline of his health, which commenced about four years since. It is well known that the mail from Boston to Portland, has been conveyed with more rapidity and punctuality, for the last twenty years, than for the same distance in any part of the United States; and this was owing principally to the energy and perseverance of the deceased.

VIIth Generation: FREDERICK WILLIAM, youngest of the six children of William Paine and Lois Orne, his wife, was born May 23d, 1788, at Salem, Mass. He removed with his father to Worcester, in 1793, consequent upon the demise of his grand-father, the Hon. Timothy Paine. His early instruction was received from the Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Parker. When fourteen years old he corrected the proof sheets of the first Greek Testament published in North America. The following year, 1803, he entered an advanced class of Harvard College, Cambridge, but at the expiration of nine months, quitted an academical for a commercial life.

In 1806 he made a voyage round the world, visiting the Northwest coast of America, and China. Returning to this country in 1809, he again made the same voyage. He arrived home in 1812, and then visited England. From thence he proceeded to India, the Philippine Islands, and the Isle of France. In 1816 he returned to the United States, and soon after visited Europe again, traveling upon the continent during the space of a year. He returned home, and in 1818 again proceeded to Europe, where he resided several years, conducting there the foreign negotiations of the commercial house of James and Thomas H. Perkins, which enjoyed on professional reputation second to none in North America, at home a pride and honor to the Exchange, abroad elevating the commercial character of the country, by the truth, integrity and honor with which in every climate their enterprises were conducted.*

On his return to this country, May 5th, 1822, Mr. Paine espoused Anne Cushing Sturgis, fifteenth child of the sixteen children of the Hon. Russell Sturgis and Elizabeth Perkins, his wife, of Boston, Mass.—the latter being a sister of James and Thomas H. Perkins.

In 1825 he again visited Europe, returning to this country in the following year. Since that time, following in the footsteps of his ancestors, Mr. Paine has completely identified himself with the local interests of his native place. That portion of his time not devoted to the administration of the municipal affairs of Worcester, and other objects of public utility, has been given exclusively to books and flowers. He is noted for extensive literary resources, and has a successful amateur in horticulture. The cultivation of the family estate of The Oaks enjoys more than a century of history, and the library, mounting upwards of eight hundred volumes, is one of the largest and most valuable private collections in the State.

Mr. Paine was Chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Worcester, member of the General Court, President of the Here end the descendants, in the senior line, of the Hon. Timothy and Madam Paine.

From a series of letters which appeared in the Worcester Palladium, in the year 1855, under the assumed name of Carl, illustrating the early history of the town and noticing some of its most distinguished families, we borrow the following account of the Pain family:

CALLEY TOUR IN MAIN STREET.

OF THE PAIN.

On the west side of Main Street, a little farther south than the United States Hotel, is the house which had long been occupied by the Pains. It is a small one-story story with a brick chimney and a porch occupied by Mr. Paine when a practicing lawyer, and he was assumed the office of Justice of the Peace. What became of the little house is not known, but it is believed to have been moved from its foundation to a new site, and now stands on the west side of Main Street. The ground is now covered by the four-story brick building which was built by the Pains in the year 1800, and was the first brick building in the town, and was once used as a church, now stands the brick church of the Second Baptist Society, and other buildings devoted to various purposes. There is nothing there now to remind one of the great old mansion of Judge Paine, as it was when many boys eyes first surveyed it.

My father said that the Pains were an old family in Worcester; that they came here, in the early days of the town, from that point of land that projects down south of Seekonk plains, and makes a dividing point between the water of Narragansett and Mount Hope bays; where the town of Bristol now stands. As long ago as 1709, as appears from the Massachusetts records, the grandfather of the late Judge Paine (Nathaniel, of Bristol), had his attention directed to the "chestnut lands" upon the west side of Quinsigamond Lake. It happened in this way. Joseph Sawyer and others, petitioned the General Court to survey and grant them the lands upon the west side of the lake, that they might make another effort to establish a settlement here. The Council granted the request, and ordered the appointment of Commissioners to carry into effect the prayer of the petitioners. Nathaniel Paine, of Bristol, was named in the order as one of the Commissioners. But the order was lost in the house. I can not assert it is a fact, and I can not now ascertain the truth of it, but it is my impression that Nathaniel, of Bristol, was early a proprietor of the land now known as the Paine estate in the upper part of Lincoln street; and that he may have come into possession of it by purchase from Nathaniel Henchman, who owned what was afterwards the Lincoln farm, and whose house, if I remember the spot where my father said it stood, was in the Lincoln garden, a little east of the old or original road, traveled between Boston and Springfield, which then ran along by the side of Lincoln Pond, and across the land which is now known as Hamilton Square. It must have been, however, nearly twenty years after the first permanent settlement in Worcester, that Nathaniel, of Bristol, occupied the Paine estate; for his son Timothy (the father of the late Judge of Probate), was but a lad, not then in his teens, when he became a resident in Worcester. He was a young man of promise, and was early sent to the college of Cambridge, where he graduated at the early age of eighteen. He was designed for the profession of law; but at that time the business of making writs and deeds was carried on by a set of Caleb Quetens, who discherd in other things besides the law, and impaired the prospect for a young man whose purpose it was to obtain a living by his profession. It was about the same time also that the afterwards celebrated James Putnam came into town from Salem, and opened a law office. Young Timothy Paine was intimate with him and profited much from his friendship. Having the offer of the place of Clerk of the Courts he accepted the office, the duties of which, he discharged for a period of twenty-four years, until the suspension of the administration of justice in 1774. For a period of ten years, he also performed the duties of Register of Probate, and likewise of Register of Deeds; and for quite a number of years he was also one of the Selectmen and Town Clerk. I mention these facts to show the estimation in which Timothy Paine was held by his fellow citizens of the town and country; and as evidence that he was then a man of mark in the community. You remember that I gave some account, in a former chapter, of his having received the appointment of Mandamus Councillor to the Royal Governor; and of the mode and manner in which he was induced to resign it, by the interference of the Patriot party, backed up by the three thousand armed men who came into town to compel the town to take back their protest against the patriot cause. Mr. Paine appears to have borne himself in a dignified and honorable manner on that trying occasion; and that he retained the confidence and esteem of his townsmen, is manifest from the fact that while the war was in progress, as appears on record, he was appointed chairman of a committee of the town to protest, to the legislature, against the imposition of taxes for the support of government, upon spirituous liquors, teas and other articles; and that when the Revolution had gone by, the animosities of parties had subsided, and civil freedom was assuming the form and the strength of well-regulated constitutional liberty, he represented the town for two years in the general court.

My father said that Timothy Paine had three sons; all of whom he knew. Their names were William, Samuel and Nathaniel; and that he had the ability to give them a good education, is apparent from the fact that they all graduated at Harvard College in a period of seven years. The eldest was William, of whom I have spoken in a former chapter. He was born about the time that his father was appointed clerk of the courts, and was a pupil of the elder Adams while he was living here as a law student in James Putnam's office. After leaving college he studied medicine in Salem with that celebrated medical practitioner, Dr. Holyoke, whom my father said that he once saw walking the streets of that city, when his head had been frosted by a century of winters. He was one of the signers of the Protest, already spoken of, and for that reason was obliged to take up his residence as a refugee in a foreign land. But as he came back and lived many years on the ancestral estate, it is manifest that political sins, even in those days, were not of that class which a good life can not wipe out. The funeral of Dr. Paine, as it moved from his residence on the afternoon of a spring day, something more than twenty years ago, is among the recollections of my early days. The estate is still owned and occupied by the Paine family, of the third and fourth generations in descent from Nathaniel, of Bristol.

Samuel, the second son of Timothy Paine, who is recorded as a graduate of Harvard College in 1771—three years after William, and four years before Nathaniel—assisted his father in his office of clerk and register, and became involved as one of the signers of the Protest. He went to the Provinces, and found employment and support in the British service until after the war was over.

The third son of Timothy, was the late Nathaniel Paine, whose residence I have pointed out in the opening of this chapter. He was well known to the people of Worcester and of the county, having filled the office of Judge of Probate for more than a third of a century. I remember his person as he appeared in the Probate Court, with the venerable Timothy Wheelock for his registrar, on one occasion when my father said to me, "Come, Carl, go with me, and I will show you the Probate Court, where the estates of dead men are settled up, and disposed of according to law." But I have no knowledge of Judge Paine that would enable me to present anything like a truthful analysis of his character; though I remember that an accident, which is too personal in its nature to be here related, once threw me in his way; and that he was pleased to compliment me to my face, for an act performed, in a manner that satisfied me, at least, that he was a man of excellent discernment, of a high sense of right, and of much native goodness of heart; a worthy son of a worthy sire.

Yours,

CARL.

85.] A BRIEF RECORD OF THE ABINGTON PAINES.

EDWARD PAINE, SEN., b. Jan. 22, 1710, was the son of Stephen Paine, of Rehoboth, Mass., whose father and grandfather (their names both Stephen), were born in Norfolk co., England. They came to this country in 1658, settling first in Hingham, Mass., from which place they removed to Rehoboth.

Edward's father died when he was an infant. We are told that his mother, when he was about two years old, removed to Preston, Ct., where he was bound out to a farmer. He was married, April 6, 1732 to Lois Kinney (b. March 18, 1613). His 2d wife's name was Spaulding, of Plainfield, Ct. Not far from this time he removed to Pomfret, Windham co., Ct., into that part of the town afterwards called Abington Society, taking wife and personal property with him, upon one horse. In a section of the country then new, he bought a farm of unencultivated land upon which he lived and died. He is said to have been a man of upright character, strict integrity, and prosperous in worldly affairs. Though his knowledge of figures was limited, he could calculate largely, readily and accurately in his head. He was interested in religious matters, and was probably a member of the Congregational Church.

He had 11 children. The following are their names and the times of their births:

Thus it will be seen that there was nothing very striking or peculiar in the history of the Abington Paines. They were modest, and minded their own business. Edward of Montague once said to me, "When Nathan and I were boys, father would say, 'Boys, you may have your choice, go to the woods or to school?' I shouldered my axe; Nathan started for school." Nathan Sen.'s children, about whom the most has been said, were most of them professors of religion. Those who are gone, passed through the world as noiselessly and happily as most people; those who remain, cherish hope of a better inheritance.

Truly and respectfully,

ONE OF THE ABINGTON PAINES.

A RHODE ISLAND FAMILY.

THE PAINES appear to bear a larger proportion to the rest of the population in Rhode Island than in any other state. They are, however, of several different families, but as the records yet received are by no means complete, it is impossible to designate their early origin in every case. Not a few of the families of our name have been represented in that state from a very early date, and as the town, county and other records are easily accessible, and no doubt capable of solving many of the obscurities which still hang over their genealogy, it is to be hoped that early research will be made among these authentic archives for the desired information.

From data furnished by Mr. Jonathan Paine and Mr. Emanuel Newton Paine, we are enabled to compile the following account of one of the most prolific of the Rhode Island families. The prevalence of the name in the vicinity of Narragansett Bay will be easily explained if the other families can exhibit so fruitful a record.

According to tradition there were among the early settlers of Rhode Island, five brothers, named respectively, STEPHEN, who settled in Gloucester; BENJAMIN, in Smithfield; SOLOMON, in Johnston; JOHN, in Cranston, and one whose name is forgotten, in Foster. These were but a part of the family, however. Another brother, DAVID, it is said, removed to Connecticut, and settled in Ashford or Woodstock; another (name unknown) went into Massachusetts, and one was lost at sea. It is not yet ascertained who was the ancestor of these brothers. Samuel of Woodstock had a son David, b. 1702-3 [see Art. 77, No. 5], but the names of the brothers do not correspond with the known sons of Samuel. May they not have been descendants of Jons, b. 1656, a brother of Samuel, of whom it is only known that he removed to Providence, R. I., and had children? There are some reasons for thinking so which for want of space can not now be given.

One of these brothers, STEPHEN, had, as far as now known, but one son, also named Stephen, born at Gloucester, R. I., 1718; d. 1800, aged 82. He was twice married and had eleven children. Of these children no other information has been received except Jonathan, and the fact that the four eldest sons had in all forty-eight children.

JONATHAN was b. Aug. 18, 1776; m. Ruth Barnes, of Gloucester, who d. April 29, 1854. Jonathan was still living in 1856. Children:

1. ARNOLD, b. May 17, 1796; m. 1st, Martha Baker; 2d, Amy Sherman, of Gloucester. Had 11 children; resides in Smithfield, R. I.

3. MARY ANN, b. March 26, 1798; m. Daniel Baker, of Gloucester; d. 1853. Had four children.

3. STEPHEN, b. Nov. 8, 1799; m. 1st, Mary Cooper, of Burrillville, R. I.; 2d, ———. Had 11 children.

4. OTIS, b. June 23, 1801; m. Elizabeth Whipple, of Gloucester; d. Nov. 4, 1840. Had six children.

5. ARNOLD, b. March 23, 1803; m. 1st, Stephen Latham, of Smithfield; 2d, Daniel Thornton, of Johnston, R. I. Had two sons. She d. April 16, 1848.

6 and 7. JOSEPH and SAMUEL (twins), b. April 27, 1805; Joseph m. Mary Wood, of Johnston; resides in Providence. Had two children. Sarah m. Arthur Latham, of Smithfield; resides in N. Providence. Had 11 children.

8. LYDIA, b. May 1, 1808; m. Freeman Wynn, of Massachusetts, who d. Aug. 1852. She d. April 11, 1845. Had one daughter.

9. ANNETTA, b. Oct. 9, 1809; m. John S. Green, of Burdville. Had one daughter.

10. CHENE, b. Aug. 6, 1811; m. Phebe Cole, of Gloucester. Had 11 children.

11 and 12. CLARA-SARAH and CORNELIA (twins), b. April 17, 1814; Cordelia m. Otis Thornton, of Scituate. Had 11 children. Clattissa was m. in 1856.

By the above record it appears that Jonathan Paine had had more than fifty grandchildren, of whom all but eight were living in 1856. To these should be added eleven great-grandchildren, not included in the above.

Another of the brothers first mentioned, BENJAMIN, who settled in Smithfield about the beginning of the last century, had a family which might challenge attention even among patriarchs, as will appear by the following well authenticated record. Benjamin had four wives, each of whom bore him children, viz:

Children by the first wife:

The preceding pedigree, though confined as much as possible to blood relations, and preserve a continuity of family history, takes in a wide range of connections by blood and by marriage, in the genealogical descent from HANNAH PAINE, in which the Binneys, the Lincolns, and the Goulds bear a prominent part. Indeed it has been said, that their intermarriages have been so frequent, that they constitute what may with propriety be called one great family, from that great ancestress down to the present day.

91.] THE PAINES OF WORCESTER, MASS.

In this article we shall conclude the enumeration of the descendants of the Hon. Timothy and Madam Paine.

1, WILLIAM

11, TIMOTHY, was born Jan. 5th, 1752, at Worcester. He died Dec. 29th, 1775, at Mendon, Mass.—unmarried.

111, SAMUEL, was born Aug. 23d, 1753, at Worcester. His name stands at birth in the class of 1771 of Hays and C. Hays, Cambridge. Like other members of his family of the period of the revolutionary struggle, he did not escape mourning

* See Registers No. 4 [57], No. 3 [51], and No. 6 [51].

the disfigurement of the great enemies of the Paine family—the Whigs.

"On the eighth of May, 1775, Mr. Samuel Paine, accused of circulating reports injurious to the honor of the provincial army, was arrested and sent under guard to the Congress at Watertown, by order of the town."[†]

It is amusing to consider what these "injurious reports" were.

In 1775 he was sent by the Committee of Worcester, under guard, to Watertown or Cambridge, to be dealt with as the honorable Congress or Commander-in-chief, shall, upon examination think proper. His direct offences consisted apparently in saying that the Hampshire troops had robbed the house of Mr. Bradish; that he had heard the Whig soldiers were deserting in great numbers; and that he was told the men were so close stowed in the colleges, that they were bony! This is the substance of the testimony of a neighbor, the only witness who appeared against him, and who had a conversation with him, in the garden of the witness, immediately after he had been on a visit to Cambridge, where the Whig army was then encamped. In 1776 Mr. Paine accompanied the British army from Boston to Halifax."[‡]

Mr. Bradish, thus referred to, was Mr. Paine's brother-in-law. Neither history nor tradition have informed us what punishment the honorable Congress or Commander-in-chief thought proper to inflict upon Mr. Paine for his weighty transgressions, but he survived having incurred their wrath and that of the vigilant and jealous town of Worcester, many years, and finally came to a peaceful end.

"The refugees in Boston addressed Gen. Gage on his departure from the capital, in respectful terms. Among the subscribers of the paper presented, were some who had been among the most distinguished citizens of Worcester. John Chandler, James Putnam, Samuel Paine, William Chandler, Nathaniel Chandler, and James Putnam, Jr., subscribed the address."[§]

From Halifax Mr. Paine went to England. He lived several years in London. The enjoyment of a pension from the British government, combined with a patrimony not inconsiderable for these days, precluded the necessity of his sharing those sufferings and privations encountered by too many devoted loyalists in their adopted country, after they had escaped continually and persecution in their own. He returned to this country in 1805. He died unmarried, at Worcester, June 21st, 1807.

Mr. Paine was a man of elegance and fashion in his day, and is said to have resembled closely, in person and manners, the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. His portrait by Fale, of London, is in the possession of George A. Bradish, Esq., of Worcester.

IV. HANSON, was born July 22d, 1755, at Worcester. He resided at Appleton Oct. 21, 1772, and is thus chronologically the first physiologist of the period:

"This day Ebenezer Bradish, Esq., of Cambridge, was united in the most agreeable state of human life, to Miss Hannah Paine, daughter of the Honorable Timothy Paine, Esq., of this Place—of whom it may not be told her acquaintance, that she is one of the most deserving of her sex."

[§] See the obituary for 1 companion blog, "Worcester and the City of Cambridge."

Immediately upon admission he commenced practice in Groton, Mass., and after four years residence there returned to Worcester. He succeeded Daniel Baglow, Esq., as county attorney. In 1789, 1790, and 1799, he represented the town in the Legislature. He was appointed Judge of Probate Jan. 24, 1801, and held that office thirty-five years. His resignation was accepted Jan. 18, 1836.[¶]

He married Dec. 18, 1783, his first cousin, Elizabeth Chandler, daughter of Gardner Chandler, the High Sheriff of Worcester county and Colonel in the Royal Militia. She was the greatest heiress in the county. The marriage is thus announced:

[Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Dec. 22, 1785.]

"The family of Chandler were well loved and agreeable people, and I as often visited them as my school and my duties in the lawyer's office would permit—especially Col. Gardner Chandler, with whom I was the most intimate."

[§] Diary and Correspondence of President John Adams.

MARRIED,] Mr. James Perkins, of Boston, Merchant, to Miss Sally Paine, Second daughter of the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esquire.

[Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Jan. 19, 1786.]

She resided at Pine Bank, the splendid country-seat of the family, at Roxbury, and also in Boston, where she died, Dec. 24, 1841, aged 77, having had issue: 1, Sarah Paine, d. young; 2, Sarah Paine, d. unm.; 3, James, m. his second cousin, Eliza Callahan, of Boston, and had issue:

1. James, d. young.
2. Sarah Paine, m. Feb. 1, 1808, Henry Russell Cleveland, of Lancaster. Issue: Eliza Perkins, b. Jan. — 1829.
3. Edward Newton, m. Mary Spring.
4. Charles Callahan, m. Fanny D. Bruen. Issue: 1, Mary Elenora; 2, Clifford.
5. James Henry, d. unm.

Mrs. Perkins m. 2dly, the Right Rev. George W. Deane, D. D., LL. D., protestant episcopal bishop of New Jersey, and had issue:

1. William, M. D.
2. George, in holy orders, in the church of Rome, and secretary to the Right Rev. the Roman Catholic bishop of New Jersey.

A curious contrast is presented in comparing the rejoicings which celebrated the nuptials of Miss "Sally" Paine and Mr. James Perkins, with the customs prevalent on similar occasions in families in the same condition in life in our own day. In regard to this marriage, the last survivor of the Perkins family writes thus:

"In the case of my brother's marriage, nearly eighty-nine years have not entirely obliterated the incidents, although it has faded; and you have revived the memory of my journey from Boston to Worcester, with my brother, on the great occasion of his marriage. It was in the winter season, and in a small open sleigh. We happened to be met in a snow bank! This, too, with the remembrance of a sleighing party and dance at Leicester, with its accompanying jollification, are all the lingering memories of that bygone time."

A portrait of Mrs. Perkins by Gambardella is in the possession of Edward N. Perkins, Esq., of Pine Bank, and one by Stewart Newton, R. A., is in the possession of George A. Trumbull, Esq., of Worcester.

The Perkins family "by the amount and discriminating nature of their bounty for the support of learning and the relief of suffering, and by their readiness to aid in every patriotic design, have rendered their names synonymous with public spirit and benevolence. * * *

The character of James Perkins, like that of the commercial house of which he was the elder partner, was formed on the purest and noblest model of professional uprightness, without guile and without reproach. * * *

From the marriage of James Perkins with Sarah Paine, Russell Sturgis with Elizabeth Perkins, Frederick William Paine with Anne Cushing Sturgis, and James Perkins, Jr., with Eliza Callahan (a granddaughter of Mary Chandler, wife of Benjamin Greene, and eldest sister of his grandmother, Mrs. Timothy Paine), a triple alliance exists between the senior branch of the PERKINS family of the Oaks, Worcester, and the senior branch of the PAINES family of Pine Bank, Roxbury.

X. ELIZABETH, was born Jan. 12, 1766, at Worcester. Her marriage is thus noticed:

MARRIED,] Dr. Joseph Trumbull, of Peterham, to

* Josiah Quincy—History of Harvard University. By a series of munificent endowments the Perkins family founded the Perkins Institution for the Blind and the Boston Almshouse, at Boston, Mass., and the Perkins Professorship of Astronomy and Mathematics at Harvard College, Cambridge.

For an extended notice of the character of James Perkins see the above work.

the very amiable Miss Elizabeth Paine, youngest daughter of the Hon. Timothy Paine, Esq., of this town.

[Massachusetts Spy, Worcester, Feb. 16, 1786.]

She resided principally at Worcester, where she died July 10, 1832, aged 66, leaving as sole issue: George Augustus, b. Jan. 23, 1792, m. Sept. 29, 1815, Louisa Clap, of Greenwich, Mass. Issue: 1, Elizabeth, b. Aug. 31, 1816; m. Oct. 22, 1835, William Sever Lincoln; 2, George Clap, b. March 8, 1818, m. Oct. 16, 1835, Nancy Woodbury Moore; 3, Caroline Bulfinch, b. June 24, 1820, m. July 18, 1855, George Franklin Hart-horn; 11, Mary Abbott, b. Feb. 2, 1837; 12, John, b. March 23, 1841.

Here ends the genealogy of the Worcester branch of the Rehoboth Paines. In concluding this article, we shall offer certain corrections and additions to the account of the earlier generations of the family.

Vth Generation: NATHANIEL, of Bristol, R. I. He was a member of the General Court, member of the Executive Council of the Province, and a Colonel in the Royal Militia. In 1709 he was one of a Committee of three appointed by the Council to consider the expediency of granting a petition for the resettlement of the town of Worcester. He died in 1741. His widow, Sarah, daughter of Timothy Clark, of Boston, married 2d, the Hon. John Chandler, whose daughter, Sarah Chandler, married her son, Timothy Paine, and whose son, John Chandler, Jr., married her daughter, Dorothy Paine—thus doubly cementing family interests. See Clark's Tour, No. 6 (81).

The Hon. Nathaniel Paine left issue:

I. EDWARD, who married a daughter of Benjamin Bosworth, of Bristol, R. I. He was a merchant of eminence, and a useful citizen of Boston, Mass. He held various honorable posts in the town of his adoption. He ultimately spent his name Payne.—See No. 3 (54).

II. NATHANIEL, who married a daughter of William Gal-

III. SAMUEL, died young.

IV. SAMUEL CLARK, was a Captain in the Royal forces. He commanded a company in the campaign under General Sir Geoffrey Amherst in which year he died, Dec. 21, 1759, unmarried.

V. SARAH, who married Thomas Drowne, of Boston, Mass. Issue: Nathaniel Paine. Graduated at Harvard College, 1794. Other issue, if any, unknown.

VI. DOROTHY, who married, March 5, 1741, the Hon. John Chandler, who filled in turn the offices of Judge, Clerk, and Counsellor, as his ancestors had done. The Chandlers not only dispensed justice in the courthouse, but "kept open table on court days for the widows and orphans by night to their tribunal by concerns of business."

Dorothy Paine died Oct. 5, 1745, leaving issue: 1, John, from whom descend the Chandlers of Lancaster, Mass., b. March 3, 1742; 2 and 3, Gardner and Clark, twins, b. 1800, 1743; Gardner, d. young; Clark, who nearly the luckless town clerk of Worcester, died a martyr in the royal cause, from disease contracted in the prison to which his steadfast loyalty consigned him, notwithstanding the wretched "mad-moment" administered to him by the town of Worcester, under circumstances already related. He died June 1, 1804, unmarried.

The Hon. John Chandler married 2d Mary Church, of Bristol, R. I., and had fourteen children. From Sarah, 7th child, who married John Stanton, then John Sarah, who married Joshua Blake, and Sarah Chandler, who married Benjamin Austin, descend: 1, George Blake, b. Oct. 31, 1838; 2, Sally Blake, b. Jan. 28, 1840.

The Hon. John Chandler died in London, Oct. 27, 1800.

VII. TIMOTHY.
